Vancouver-born Playmate shot dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dorothy Stratten of Vancouver, Playboy magazine's current Playmate of the Year, was killed with a shotgun blast in the face, apparently by her estranged husband, who then shot himself to death, police said today.

The body of the 20-year-old beauty was found at 12:30 a.m. sprawled across the bed in the two-storey, West Los Angeles home she had shared until recently with her husband, Paul Snider, 29, formerly of Surrey.

Neither was dressed, and Snyder was found on the floor, on top of the shotgun, said police Lieut. Glenn Ackerman. The lieutenant said friends came to the house and found the couple after no one had been able to reach Snyder since Thursday afternoon.

"The indications are that they died sometime yesterday (Thursday) afternoon," Ackerman said.

He said the couple had been married about two years, but for the last two months Ms. Stratten had been living elsewhere. Ackerman said the couple's relatives were out of the country.

"The death of Dorothy Stratten comes as a shock to us all," said Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner in a statement released by his office. "She was a beautiful and talented woman. As Playboy's Playmate of the Year and with a film and TV career of increasing importance, her professional future was a bright one. But equally sad to us was the fact that the loss takes from us all a very special friend of the Playboy family."

Ms. Stratten's most recent appearance was in a Peter Bogdanovich film, They All Laughed, and in a movie called Galaxina, that has not yet been released, said Playboy. She also had bit parts in the movies Americathon and Skatetown, U.S.A.

The tall blonde first appeared in a Playboy centrefold in August, 1979, and was named Playmate of 1980 last April 29. She was the first Canadian to hold the title.

Forest firm bought out

Three B.C.-based forest products companies have reached agreement with ITT Industries of Canada to purchase the assets of Rayonier Canada for about $420 million.

B.C. Forest Products Ltd., Doman Industries Ltd. and Whonnock Industries Ltd. said they will participate as equal partners in the ownership and operation of the venture.

Each company will pay $140 million.

A BCFP spokesman called it "a bail-out operation."

The spokesman said Rayonier's financial position had been questionable and it had been obvious that ITT had been looking for a buyer.

No B.C. company wanted to get involved on its own.

After the purchase, Rayonier will continue to operate as a separate company but will get a new name.

There is no plan to change management at the present time.

But the three purchasing companies will appoint all members to the new board of directors.

The new company will operate out of the Rayonier office in Vancouver, where 200 people are employed. In all Rayonier Canada has 3,000 employees in B.C.

"We hope we can protect all 3,000 jobs," a spokesman said.

"We got involved in this because we believe it is better for B.C. forest products companies to have their headquarters in Vancouver rather than New York."

The three firms have not completed a financial study of Rayonier and it is not known how long it will take to show a profit.

None of the assets will be transferred to the three companies. The sale is scheduled to be completed on Sept. 30.

ITT Industries is a wholly-owned subsidiary of International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. of New York. It has been a liability for the ITT conglomerate, which was forced to write off Rayonier losses of $2.10 U.S. a share last year.

Hospital sit-ins staged

More than 500 Hospital Employees' Union members at four Victoria-area hospitals staged sit-ins today.

They took the action, union sources said, to protest a breach of pay provisions in their contract with the Health Labor Relations Association.

The sit-ins involve workers at the Glengarry, Priory, Mount Tolmie and Aberdeen hospitals.

A number of Victoria General HEU members wore protest T-shirts to work.

Bob Donahue, Vancouver Island labor relations consultant to the HLRA, called the employees' work interruption "an illegal job action."

The union and the association, which bargains for hospitals, were to meet this afternoon with the Labor Relations Board in Vancouver.

Donahue said the association will ask the LRB to intercede.

"We'll ask them to get the employees back to work pursuant to our agreement with them," he said.

The key to the dispute involves a pay hike brought into effect Aug. 1.

Only those employees with classified jobs received the full eight-per-cent increase. The remainder, about 30 per cent, received only four per cent.

Donahue said that under the agreement the full increase would not be made for employees in unclassified job categories until a system of matching salaries they receive with those employees doing the same type of work in other government services are getting is completed.

He said the agreement specifies that if it was found HEU employees received more pay than those in other government services they would be limited to a four-per-cent increase.

If they got less, then they would receive the full eight per cent.

Inflation stuck at 10%

1971 dollar is now worth a mere 47¢

OTTAWA (CP) — The annual inflation rate remains steady at 10.1 per cent even though the consumer price index increased more slowly by 0.8 per cent in July from a month earlier, Statistics Canada reported today.

As a result of the latest rise, the purchasing power of a consumer's dollar fell to 47 cents from $1.00 in 1971.

Food prices, which account for one-quarter of the index, increased only 0.9 per cent in July compared with a 2.2 per cent jump in June. The influx of domestic produce in late summer months usually helps slow food prices until early fall.

The increase in other items excluding food rose by 0.8 per cent in July, unchanged from a month earlier, as costs rose for housing and transportation.

The index stood at 211.5 in July, up from 209.9 in June. The index, a widely-used measure of inflation, shows that a basket of goods and services which cost $100 in 1971 now costs $211.50.

The index, above 10 per cent for the second month in a row, matches similar increases last seen in late 1975 shortly after wage and price controls were introduced.

Finance Minister Allan MacEachen had forecast about a 10 per cent rise in the index but, until he brings in an expected fall budget, is not likely to announce inflation-fighting measures.

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative treasury board critic, called the latest figures alarming and said a budget is "long overdue." He said the government must reduce its $14.1 billion spending deficit to help in the fight against inflation.

Despite the slower pace of food price increases, costs rose for some fresh fruits and vegetables while consumers in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Alberta paid more for milk and other dairy products.

But the higher costs were offset by lower prices for beef cuts and sugar.

In July, the index of food for home use was up 9.3 per cent above a year earlier while food away from home rose only 8.5 per cent. As a result, the food index was up 9.1 per cent from a year ago.

Postal interrogators told how to bend rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — A suspect's demands to see his lawyer in the case of postal thefts should be discouraged so chances of a confession are enhanced, says a paper distributed at a postal investigators training course in 1974.

The paper, which sets out a list of interrogation techniques, came to light at hearings of an inquiry into post office security being held in Vancouver this week.

The training document came as somewhat of an embarrassment to postal officials who are lobbying to have their security and investigation branch set up as a departmental police force with powers to arrest, make searches and gather evidence.

Although Jack Foster, director of security and investigation for the Western postal region, said the paper and its handy hints for interrogators were never post office policy and was prepared by a Calgary city police inspector named Roberts, there are references throughout to mail thefts and postal investigators.

Foster told the inquiry, headed by Ontario county

Titanic found, searchers say

NEW YORK (AP) - A U.S. search party believes it has found the ocean liner Titanic, which sank 68 years ago after hitting an iceberg 330 nautical miles off the Newfoundland coast, the expedition leader reported today.

"We think we've got the Titanic," Mike Harris said by ship-to-shore telephone from the reseach vessel H.J.W. Fay.

Jimmy's triumph upstaged

NEW YORK (AP) — On his night of triumph, Jimmy Carter could have expected it: the crowd's biggest roar greeted the man he beat, Edward Kennedy.

Delegates to the Democratic national convention, having duly renominated him, gave the president a respectful hearing. But there was no passion in their response. The passion was saved for Kennedy.

Carter had hoped to at least share the senator's spotlight in a traditional show of unity. But there was no upraising of arms, only a cool handshake from Kennedy.

Carter's speech was a warning to the Democrats about the evils of Ronald Reagan Republicanism and the burden of their times.

"We told the truth, the hard truth," Carter said. "The truth sometimes hurt."

Not much to cheer about there.

And, stunningly, there was the rumble of booing that rose in the middle of Carter's speech when, describing himself as a man of action in the White House, he cited his grain embargo against the Soviet Union and the registration of youth for military draft.

Cheers and chanting arose to compete with the jeers, but a renewed booing greeted Carter's mention of the American boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games, souring the televised program's attempt to show a party unified for the struggle against the Republicans.

The president finished speaking. He was applauded. The band played. But there was not much else of a response.

More eyes were on a ceiling basket of balloons that wouldn't open than on a president claiming his party's reward.

It was that kind of speech and that kind of convention: Carter was the foreordained winner, but Kennedy was the sentimental favorite.

Within minutes after Carter had finished talking, the crowd was shouting "We want Ted."

Kennedy had not been in the convention hall for Carter's speech, staying instead in his hotel. The president and the party had to wait for Kennedy to make his way through Manhattan traffic to Madison Square Garden.

And when he finally reached the jammed platform, the crowd, for the first time of the night, roared.

Kennedy shook hands with Rosalynn Carter and then Amy, the president's daughter.

Carter waited. He grabbed the senator's hand and slapped his back and brought him forward.

Carter smiled broadly. Kennedy didn't. He shook hands all around and made his way off the platform.

Again the crowd cried: "We want Ted."

Again Kennedy returned.

Again the crowd cheered.

A woman in a white plastic boater held aloft a handwritten sign: "Write in Kennedy."

In his speech accepting the nomination, Carter said: "Ted, your party needs — and I need — you. I need your idealism and dedication working for us. There is no doubt that even greater service lies ahead of you. And we will make great partners this fall in whipping the Republicans."

The delegates applauded.

Carter, the winner, was upstaged by Kennedy, the loser.

Constitution counter attack rises

Times News Services

The storm over Ottawa's $6 million advertising campaign plugging constitutional reform intensified Thursday with Quebec mounting a counter campaign and B.C. screaming foul.

Alberta, meanwhile, was urged to adopt its own advertising blitz to offset the federal campaign.

Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau provided no details of his province's multimedia push, but Government House Leader Claude Charron said it would cost about $500,000 and would run for about three weeks beginning next week.

Ottawa has earmarked $2 million of its campaign budget for Quebec.

The Quebec government's advertisements will deal with such areas as the economy, linguistic rights and natural resources.

In Victoria, Intergovernmental Relations Minister Garde Gardom said Ottawa should have told the provinces at the start of the current constitutional talks that it planned its own campaign.

It is inappropriate for the government to use tax money collected from all Canadians to articulate just one point of view, Gardom said.

If the federal government continues with the campaign, he said, it should be prepared to come to the table at the next round of discussions starting Aug. 25 with a complete statement of its precise positions — something it was criticized for not doing at earlier sessions.

Federal spokesmen could not be reached for comment.

In Calgary, Canada West Foundation President Stan Roberts urged Alberta to stage its own nation-wide ad campaign on oil-pricing and constitutional matters.

Roberts, head of a research body whose chief objective is to strengthen the West's position in Confederation, described his proposal as "unfortunate but necessary."

The federal ad program includes material such as a television spot showing Canada geese flying over water while a voice hums the national anthem and another talks about freedom.

"This is subliminal advertising which plants a message somewhere in your head that one strong voice speaking for Canada is good for you," Roberts said.

Roberts complained the federal advertisements on energy, run chiefly in newspapers, amount to a blatant disregard of the facts.

"The federal government is saying there is no energy crisis only because it has no energy policy.

"It will be up to Alberta to launch its own ad campaign to tell Canadians that there is an energy problem and that they will have to pay higher prices for energy so that exploration and development can be financed."

Ron Liepert, press secretary to Premier Peter Lougheed, said today the Alberta government has not decided on such a program.

Fire safety neglect in rest homes denied

Fire protection standards in B.C. rest homes are already at a high level of safety, according to operators and Victoria firefighters.

Replying to criticism in the legislature that the homes have neglected to stage monthly fire drills as required by law, Fire Chief Mike Heppell and several operators told the Times that safety has not been neglected.

"We recommend very frequent fire drills, but evacuation is just not possible. It's too hard on them (the patients)," said Edna Galbraith, secretary-manager of the B.C. Association of Private Care Facilities, which has headquarters in Victoria.

John Hanrahan, operator of Douglas House in Victoria, noted that in 23 years he's been in business here there have only been a couple of minor fires in Victoria nursing homes and no injuries or deaths due to fire.

"That speaks for itself, doesn't it? Obviously we're doing something right," said the past-president of the association.

He is chairman of the association's complaints committee now, but Hanrahan said he hasn't received a single complaint abut fire safety standards.

Heppell said he was not aware of the requirement under the Community Care Facilities Act to hold monthly fire drills, as claimed by New Westminster MLA Dennis Cocke, former health minister.

"The B.C. Fire Services Act is the one we use. It states that the owner shall adopt and exercise an approved fire drill. It doesn't state at what interval."

The fire department carries out twice-yearly inspections of rest homes and nursing homes in Victoria, Heppell said.

"If conditions are favorable we may order an evacuation. At other times the drill may consist of a test for the staff."

Galbraith said there are some rest homes which do not meet fire safety standards and need to be upgraded according to the 1978 guidelines worked out by the association and the B.C. fire commissioner's office.

"They aren't places where old people should be. These operators should bring them up to the standards. They have had plenty of time."

Hanrahan said at Douglas House, there are monthly fire drills where everyone is evacuated, but only during spring and summer. In the colder months, a meeting of of staff and residents is substituted where fire safety procedures are discussed.

"In the dead of winter is it advisable to pull a fire alarm and have the elderly folks come out and be exposed to the hostile elements?" asked the fire chief.

"Very often you have people collapse during a fire drill," said Hanrahan.

Maxine Marcotte, administrator of the 214-bed James Bay Lodge, said she agreed with Heppell.

"It is upsetting to the residents."

An official at Richardson Manor, 637 Richardson, said fire drills and evacuations are held but "we haven't had them for a while."

Three youths abandoned

OTTAWA (CP) — Three Ottawa teen-agers, on a northern canoe trip sponsored by the Children's Aid Society, were left this week without food in the wilderness of the Kipawa Reserve in Quebec, about 300 kilometres northwest of here.

The youths returned home Wednesday after being discovered in the woods by a Montreal couple and a bush pilot. They were left unattended Monday morning and were found wandering about 20 kilometres away that night.

A spokesman for the Quebec Police Force in Temiscaming said Thursday the boys, aged 14 to 15, were left on the shore of Lake Saseginaga by their trip leaders when they refused to get into the canoes. There were reports at least some of the boys had been involved in a fight with the trip leaders the previous night.

Bush pilot Conrad Kleish found one of the boys, 15-year-old Paul Williams, wandering along a logging road. He described the youth as "absolutely terrified . . . and totally incoherent."

The other two boys, Marc Leduc, 14, and Robert Moreau, 15, were discovered by a vacationing Montreal couple when they broke into their cabin to steal a jar of peanut butter and some bread.

They were taken to a Quebec government social service agency.

Geriatric unit gets okay

The provincial government has approved a $177,000 geriatric assessment and treatment unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Teams of health-care professionals at the unit will assess elderly people suffering complex health problems.

Health Minister Rafe Mair said Thursday proper assessments can prevent many unnecessary admissions to acute-care facilities.

Cost of the unit will be shared on a 60-40 basis by the province and the Capital Regional Hospital District.

Alcan revising $2.5B plans

VANCOUVER (CP) — Court decisions limiting the baronial rights the Aluminium Co. of Canada had enjoyed over a river system in northern British Columbia have forced the company to reconsider its enormous expansion plans.

Alcan announced Thursday in a statement released here and in Montreal that it is taking a second look at the plan to spend $2.5 billion on a massive hydroelectric development and three new smelters near Kitimat, a remote community on the northwestern coast of B.C.

The B.C. Supreme Court ruled early this month that Alcan must comply with federal fisheries department orders to increase the flow of water allowed to escape from its existing hydro facility into the Nechako River system.

The fisheries department said failure to raise water levels would endanger the rich salmon fishery in the river system. Alcan argued that it did not have to comply because a 1950 agreement with the B.C. government had precedence over the relevant section of the federal Fisheries Act.

The company's refusal to comply until ordered to do so by the court also brought a howl of outrage from residents of northern B.C. who complained that Alcan was being arrogant.

"Obviously, issues raised by the residents of northwestern B.C. and the federal fisheries department are the principal reasons for this decision," Alcan president Patrick Rich said in the statement.

Rich said the company will work with residents to develop a new, revised proposal acceptable to all.

"After we've got all the environmental studies to determine all downstream requirements, we'll go back to the drawing board to see if we can come up with an economically-viable project," said Les Holroyd, Alcan public relations officer in Vancouver.

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers said Alcan's decision is encouraging as "they obviously realize they can't dry up the rivers."

"They're going to have to scale down their plans. From the point of view of the ministry of environment, that's excellent news."

Alcan's current operation at Kitimat includes a smelter powered by a 896-megawatt powerhouse that cuts the flow of the Necahako in half.

The so-called Kemano II project would have reduced the river to a trickle and cut the flow of subsidiary systems at points downstream by as much as 80 per cent.

A coalition of opponents complained that the project would harm the salmon fishery, tourism and recreation, sewage disposal and water supplies in communities along the rivers and drive away other industries.

The company estimated each of the three planned smelters would have needed 700 workers and that the project would have created 11,000 support jobs and added $1 billion annually to the local economy.

Dam study 'balderdash'

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — A B.C. Hydro cost and impact study supporting development of the proposed Site C dam has been dismissed as "pure balderdash" by a citizen's group fighting the project.

But the Peace Valley Environmental Association will hold its fire until eventual hearings, said spokesman Randal Hadland, an area farmer.

A Hydro statement said the Site C hydroelectric development is by far the cheapest solution to meeting future energy demands.

The Crown corporation said a recent cost-benefit study found that the second-best alternative — a coal-fired plant at Hat Creek, near Ashcroft in the southern Interior — would cost at least $400 million more.

Airshow chicken-killer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The fans may have enjoyed the aerial antics at the Abbotsford Airshow last weekend, but the noise was scaring Karl Arndt's chickens to death.

And now Arndt isn't sure whether his insurance covers loss from fear of flying machines.

He estimates the blow to his earnings at about $5,000.

Arndt said he lost about 100 chickens by Friday morning and spent the weekend walking among his 20,000 birds, whistling to them to reassure them.

Part of Arndt's problems are due to labor troubles at Panco Poultry Cargill Co. Ltd. where his birds are processed. He says he usually has the birds in the plant at airshow time, but this year the plant was unable to take the birds on time.

He said a twist to the affair is that his insurance company, Brouwer and Co. General Insurance Adjusters Ltd., is the same one that handles the airshow.

$19M haul in heroin a record

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 32-year-old Thai has been convicted of importing more than 2.2 kilograms (five pounds) of almost pure heroin, which police said would have been worth $19 million on the street.

A county court jury also found Charan Rumruem Ning guilty of possessing a narcotic for purposes of trafficking and he will be sentenced Sept. 1.

The jury rejected Ning's defence that he was an innocent dupe set up by wealthy drug pushers in Thailand.

Ning testified he didn't know the lining of his suitcase and a briefcase contained 16 packs of the white powder. He was arrested Jan. 6 at a downtown hotel by RCMP narcotics agents acting on a tip from U.S. drug enforcement officers. It was the largest-ever haul of pure heroin in B.C.

Ning said he was given a round-trip ticket to Vancouver, $12,000 in spending money, a false passport, and the luggage by a Madame Tim, a Bankok businesswomen for whom Ning, a taxidriver, had done small jobs.

Chilcoot tackled

VANCOUVER (CP) — A troup of senior Girl Guides of Canada from the Burnaby-New Westminster area aim to recapture the spirit of the Yukon Gold Rush of 1898 by hiking over the rugged Chilkoot Pass.

Led by their co-ordinator, Cynthia Parkin, the 16 girls, who range in age from 14 to 18, were scheduled to fly tonight to Prince Rupert from Vancouver to begin their own version of the "Trail of '98".

Ms. Parkin said the party consists of 21 people — eight advisers and leaders, including four men. They expect to be hiking 4½ days, starting at Skagway, then to Dyea in Alaska and on up over the Chilkoot.

Dumps too close

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — A coroner's inquiry into the death of a 10-year-old boy killed by a bear near this north-central B.C. community has recommended garbage dumps located close to populated areas be moved at least 11 kilometres away.

Coroner Ron Heeld said Thursday the inquiry concluded Allan Russell Baines was mauled by a black bear, which was shot by fish and wildlife officials 16 hours later.

Baines was fishing with two friends July 18 when the bear attacked him near Leo Creek, 12 kilometres northwest of Fort St. James.

$20M theme park planned for PNE

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Ontario amusement park firm says it has plans to spend almost $20 million during a five-year period on a so-called "theme park" on the Pacific National Exhibition grounds.

"It won't be as big as those (Disneyland and Knott's Berry Farm in southern California)," says Hugh Holt, PNE Playland general manager for Conklin Shows. "It'll be more like Great America."

Great America is a $50-million extravaganza built on 200 acres of farmland near Chicago by hotelier J. Willard Marriot Sr. and best exemplifies the new wave of theme parks sweeping the United States.

The old amusement park has almost become passe, with a dwindling proportion of thrill-seeking adolescents seeking bigger and better, more death-defying rides.

Theme parks are just that — parks with a theme.

The themes vary widely, from Yukon mining camps to fantasy islands populated by Sesame Street characters.

The theme for Conklin's new attraction at the PNE is still undetermined, but Holt says it will be contemporary.

"It's basically in the concept stage right now," Holt said. "It changes almost every day. But we're pretty excited about it."

Conklin Shows of Brantford, Ont. took over operation of Playland last year after the PNE bought out Burrard Amusements. First phase of bringing the attractions up to what Holt calls "theme park quality" has already passed the PNE board of directors.

Approved in April, the $2.8-million initial outlay will go to a new water slide and play area, 18 holes of minigolf, a roller disco and new rides such as the Giant Wheel, Jet Star and Tidal Wave.

A theme park would operate summer-long, like Playland does now, and complement the 17-day annual exhibition.

PNE president Erwin Swangard said there is no plan to move the agricultural aspects of the exhibition to more rural areas of the Fraser Valley, as some have suggested.

"Who would go to Chilliwack and pay $2 to see a cow?" Swangard said. "It would hurt the people of B.C. We're supposed to serve all the province, not just the city of Vancouver."

Last year the PNE lost $595,000 on its farm show.

Trio picketing but beer flows

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A picket line was set up at the last operating brewery in British Columbia Thursday but it was not linked to the current labor dispute in the industry and workers ignored it.

Three former workers who picketed the Prince George Brewery did not disrupt production of the only domestic beer available in the province.

Steve Tkachuk, chairman of local 300 of the brewery workers union, said the three worked at the brewery when it was owned by Alberta-based Ben Ginter, and are demanding severance pay.

However, plant manager Nick Bennett said it appears the three have a grievance against the union.

The brewery was taken over about two years ago by a group headed by Vancouver businessman Nelson Skalbania.

Since Molson, Labatt and Carling O'Keefe locked out their workers, the Prince George Brewery has almost doubled its normal production. Bennett said output now is at about 10,000 dozen bottles and 3,000 to 1,000 gallons of draft a day.

Bennett said that if the shutdown in the rest of the industry continues, this level of production could almost double again.

The Prince George Brewery is providing beer throughout the Prince George area and to agents as far afield as Merritt, Kamloops, Penticton and Grand Forks, as well as to a few customers in the Vancouver and Victoria area.

The lockout of 1,500 employees at the three major breweries began July 26.

Ex-B.C. minister dies at 70

NANAIMO (CP) — Earle C. Westwood, a former B.C. cabinet minister and onetime mayor of this city, died Thursday at Nanaimo Regional Hospital after a short illness. He was 70.

Westwood, who was mayor of Nanaimo for five years, sat as the city's Social Credit MLA under former premier W.A.C. Bennett from 1955 to 1963.

During that period, Westwood held three ministries — parks, recreation and conservation; commerce and transport and trade and commerce.

A close friend of Bennett, Westwood was later appointed B.C. agent-general to the U.K. and Europe from 1964 to 1968.

He was a freeman of Nanaimo, an honorary title granted for service to the city, and at the time of his death was the only living freeman.

Show-off Ogopogo shedding shyness?

KELOWNA (CP) — Ogopogo, the bashful lake monster of the B.C. Okanagan, is becoming a show-off.

The legendary beastie, usually sighted once or twice during the summer tourist season, made two appearances this week alone, witnesses reported.

On Wednesday, Orm and Edith Pasquill, a retired couple from nearby Rutland, were fishing in the middle of Lake Okanagan when they noticed turbulence and waves about 30 metres from their boat.

"I saw it three times as it moved about," Pasquill said.

"I saw three humps about 10 feet from end-to-end," said Mrs. Pasquill. "I saw some of the deep, dark green or dark brown body, but no head or tail appeared."

Pasquill said the humps looked like dorsal fins.

"It couldn't have been a log," he said. "There were no other boats around as far as we could see. It was calm and hot. The creature's appearances were spread over about a 10-minute interval. Seeing is believing."

The Wednesday sighting followed one Monday in which about 30 people at the Bluebird Bay resort south of Kelowna watched from the shore as a creature reared up several times far out into the lake.

A gestation period

A few weeks ago, a Salt Spring Island doctor offered a worthwhile suggestion to overcome the bitter argument between a group of Victoria doctors and the Capital Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission over the location of obstetric care facilities. His idea would take into consideration the opinion of the customers, the expectant parents.

Whether to consolidate a first-class obstetric and pediatric ward at the new Victoria General Hospital being built at Helmcken Road and phase out those services at the Royal Jubilee Hospital or to offer obstetric and pediatric care at both hospitals is a perplexing question. The hospital commission's decision to consolidate has been condemned by many doctors, although it is difficult to say how many of the area's 220 practitioners support their position. The dispute also has created a rift between the hospital commission and the Capital Regional District, the elected authority that designates people and power to the commission.

From an economic point of view the hospital commission appears on solid ground. Taking into account the 2,000 or so children born annually in the region, it would be easier to justify the expense of specialized personnel and equipment if there were no duplication between the hospitals. The public would be offered the best care, albeit in a larger, more institutionalized setting, and the hospital would be able to attract and keep high calibre staff.

But that shouldn't override the views of the dissenting doctors led by Scott Wallace. They point out that only about 10 per cent of all pregnancies fall into risk categories that require special facilities. That is not reason enough, they argue, to close the only other obstetric unit in the city and disrupt the efficient use of their time in attending to their in-hospital patients. They also see no reason why expectant mothers who live downtown must travel to suburbs to give birth when a perfectly adequate facility exists in their neighborhood.

Dr. Charles Bostrom, who practises in Ganges, pointed out that everyone but expectant parents is involved in the discussion. He suggested the hospital commission keep Jubilee's maternity department open for at least one year after the new Victoria General opens. In an era when parents seem to be leaning towards home births and less institutionalized settings, perhaps the parents would like to be able to choose where their child is born.

We're inclined to think that most parents would want their child born where there is the best chance of coping with unforseen emergencies. A decision by a majority of parents in favor of the new Victoria General would make the whole argument academic. But a one-year trial operation of pediatric and obstetric units at both Jubilee and the new VGH, as Dr. Bostrom says, wouldn't hurt. It would allow hospital officials to make a final decision based on experience and the decisions of parents.

Deterrent or business fee?

For many years federal fisheries officers and members of provincial agencies responsible for wildlife poaching often complained that it just wasn't worth charging people for violations of conservation laws. If an offender were convicted, the courts would respond with fines so low that professional poachers would regard it as a cost of doing business.

But the attitude of the courts towards conservation has been changing, as was demonstrated recently in Victoria's provincial court. Judge Lorne Pearce fined three Sydney residents $1,000 apiece for having more that the legal limit of sport-caught abalone. Earlier this month, Judge William Ostler fined two men $800 for offering sport-caught abalone for sale and for possession of undersized abalone.

Before imposing the fine Judge Pearce said that it was his view "that the courts, in some instances, have taken a far too lenient view." No argument there. Fines must act as deterrents. Penalties of $1,000 and $800 should do the trick.

An aside: Congratulations to the fisherman who sighted three Sidney residents taking abalone in a restricted area. The court was told that as they sped off, the fisherman saw them dump three bags of abalone overboard. He dived into the water, retrieved the sacks and freed the shell-fish. A rescue beyond the call of duty.

Axes long buried at Shilo

German tank training at Shilo has been a model of Allied friendship.

WINNIPEG — The second-world war campaign ribbons that decorated the tunics of the first West German army officers who came to the Canadian prairies to conduct winter tests on their Leopard tanks in 1966 have long since disappeared. Gone too is the apprehension that existed when the ten-year tank and infantry training program for the German army was announced for Camp Shilo in 1972.

The Germans have long since crossed over the line that separates military allies and welcome friends. Nowhere was the change more evident than at a ceremony at Camp Shilo last week when Oberstleutnant (Lt.-Col.) Klaus Pietscher turned over the command of the German army unit he had held for the past four years to his successor, Oberstleutnant Nikolaus Frankenstein.

Local dignitaries

Lt.-Gov. F. L. (Bud) Jobin of Manitoba attended. The provincial government sent Agriculture Minister Jim Downey as its representative. Ken Burgess, the mayor of the nearby city of Brandon (population 38,000) sat among the distinguished visitors with his wife, and with a number of the city's civic and business leaders.

Lt.-Col. Brian McKinley, the commanding officer of Manitoba's only tank regiment, the Fort Garry Horse, whose guidon carries many battle honors won against German troops, was there, wearing his militia uniform.

A Canadian Forces piper played "Auld Lang Syne" during the change-of-command parade, and later at a reception, when Lt.-Col. Pietscher had been given a number of farewell gifts, played "Will ye no come back again."

The ceremony contained the odd mix of diplomacy and business that has characterized the army of the Federal Republic of Germany in Canada. Out of courtesy to the host country, the ceremony was probably the only German army change of command parade ever to be conducted almost entirely in English.

But out of concern to wring the last possible ounce of benefit from the time, only support troops were on parade. Although the Camp Shilo parade square had six fighting vehicles on display, including two Leopard tanks, the only troops there were the administrative personnel, the cooks and the mechanics.

Most of the 2,500 men in camp for training were doing just that, practising their craft on the five firing ranges at the camp that bear names like Berlin, Cologne, and Essen, which have more significance to the trainees than would Canadian names.

The change in command reflected also the personality of the department commander, who for the past four years had run a training camp that had caused not a whiff of unwelcome publicity in a location thousands of miles from any location where German uniforms would most likely be seen.

The contrast with what was expected, in the form of public reaction was startling. During the 1966 winter tests, the Manitoba Peace Council held a demonstration protesting against the presence of German troops on Canadian soil. The officers were questioned closely by newsmen, who learned that most of the test team had served in the campaigns in Poland, France and Italy during the Second World War.

The experience during the tank tests so unnerved the Canadian Forces that Ottawa brass considered it wise to station a permanent public relations officer at Camp Shilo for several months before the regular annual training was to begin. The officer was transferred out of Camp Shilo six months after the Germans arrived, because there was nothing for him to do.

Displaying the businesslike attitude for which they are famous, the Germans built an air-conditioned tank hangar, repair shops and tank-handling facilities unlike any to be found anywhere else in Canada. This was not surprising when it is remembered that the 64 Leopards kept at Camp Shilo, for training purposes, are more than half the number acquired for the entire Canadian army.

For seven years, the German army has rotated about 6,000 troops through Shilo each year for three-week training periods that begin in early summer and wind up before the winter winds start to blow.

During the winter, a staff of about 40 puts the tanks back in shape so that they are ready to go with the arrival of the first batch of new trainees.

The only concern about the training arrangement is its future. Negotiations to extend the present agreement, which ends in 1983, are already underway.

Ecology concern

This past year, in particular, environmental concerns have appeared. The military firing has been known to start forest fires. There have been objections raised about the damage being done by the tanks and other armored vehicles to the ecology.

The German government is financing environmental studies being carried out at the University of Manitoba, and more than $200,000 has been committed to this work.

The fires are another matter. Lt.-Col. Pietscher, in one of the few serious moments of his farewell speech, expressed his concern, but offered the suggestion that it might be better to endure a small fire at Camp Shilo, rather than experience the danger of a much larger fire in the world.

Exclusive haunt invaded

ETON, England — Is nothing sacred?

Eton, the snooty British boy's school and traditional breeding ground of Britain's poets and prime ministers, has undergone a severe attack of riffraff this week. Hundreds of holidaymakers have descended on the immortal playing fields, have invaded the cloisters and have turned the exclusive haunt into a short of intellectual Camp Minnehaha.

With Windsor Castle standing soberly in the distance, one wonders where the next crack in the ever-crumbling British upper crust will come? Perhaps the Queen will throw a jumble sale.

Throwing Eton open to the masses was the brainstorm of a former British school master, 44-year-old Brian Ashley, who convinced the Etonian governors that their empty classrooms, dormitories and cafeterias could be put to good and profitable use while the students were away on summer holidays.

Summer school

His idea was to set up a summer school for British and foreign tourists who, for a weekly fee of $415 per person, could eat, sleep, and take courses in everything from accountancy to the art cricket to cordon bleu cookery on the hallowed grounds of Eton. Soaking up the cultural atmosphere, which includes bunking in Eton's ascetic single rooms, and sharing lockless communal bathrooms was naturally, included in the cost.

After much furrowing of brows, Eton bought the idea. For even a school which charges its regular students annual fees of $8,250 cannot afford, in these inflationary times, to turn up a toffee-nose at a little extra revenue.

"It's a perfect family holiday," said Tom Greenwood, a 55-year-old Londoner, who, along with his wife Marilyn and daughter Caroline, were holidaying at Eton this week. "Parents never see their children. They're kept busy having all sorts of fun." Over a hot lunch of steak and kidney pie, prepared by Eton's regular kitchen staff, Tom extolled the pleasures of learning duplicate bridge at Eton. Marilyn talked lovingly of her course on the "principles of investment" only the plump and pouty Caroline seemed distraught.

Not so much at the thought of downing another mouthful of her glutinous lunch as at the prospect of having to weave another basket that afternoon.

But a holiday at Eton isn't only for families. Of the 200 funseekers enrolled this week, there were a number of single men and women. There was a smattering of widowers in the eighties and of demure, retired gentlemen. The younger singles looked perplexingly like a bunch who might have wanted to join the Club Med, but settled for the Book of the Month Club instead.

"I'm taking cricket and tennis as my courses," said Steven Peed, a 25-year-old civil servant, while sitting down to tea after a rousing session of wicket-keeping. "I'm always looking for different sorts of holidays. And, of course, it's nice to be able to say you've played on the playing fields of Eton."

That, in a nutshell, is the main draw of the vacation and Ashley, a man as shrewd in the art of merchandising British culture as the hawkers who sell miniature Big Bens outside Westminster, knows it. "It seems that everyone wants to say they've been to Eton, even if it's only a week or two," said Ashley.

Of course, not everyone was interested in the playing fields. Although the cricket pitches were busy and the Etonian driving range a-flutter with buffers collecting errant balls in big, black buckets, there were those who came strictly for the academic life.

Francis Jane Watson, an 80-year-old widow from Chatham, Ontario, washed up at Eton after spending a similar holiday at another British public school which Ashley organizes. "I'm past the age of worrying about whether this is Eton or not," said Mrs. Watson, who only complained about the food. "I'm taking the insight into London course this week, and our guide reads us poetry in between stops. Last week I took an art course in drawing through life. And God willing I'll be back next year."

Beefing up the Canadian contingent at Eton this week, was Tom Axworthy, Pierre Trudeau's political secretary and main speechwriter, who showed up to give, not take, a course on something called the frontier and the dream.

Tuesday afternoon, while a strong sun shone down on holidayers in their special Etonian sculls on the Thames, Axworthy lectured seven students on the American political system in a dark classroom built sometime in the mid-nineteenth century. But life for a lecturer at Eton does have its rewards. Instead of sleeping on paper-thin mattresses in red-brick Victorian dorms, Axworthy has been sleeping in a bed once used by Shelley in Eton's headmaster quarters.

"It reminds me of my days at Oxford," said Axworthy. "I spend my days reading and drinking sherry and discussing books. I accepted the offer to come here and teach when we were in the Opposition. I might have thought twice about spending two weeks of my summer over here had I known we'd be back in power."

Lights out

All things considered, a holiday at Eton is not everybodys cup of tea. Although they had one disco night, the bars shut early, there is no languishing over meals and lights go out in the dorms at 11:30 each night. Still, whether they were studying Eton's copy of the Gutenberg Bible or learning about the American electoral system from Axworthy, most people seemed to be enjoying themselves. Most said they would return, despite, as one man put it, "the appalling living conditions."

One woman, on hearing I was a reporter, even tried to enlist my help for what she called the "poor boys of Eton."

Poor? The young scholars in the footsteps of Coleridge and Shelley, the Duke of Wellington and 18 of Britain's prime ministers.

"They have abominable amenities," she said. "Imagine. One bath to every 30 boys. It's a disgrace."

Minority decision

The July 19 Times editorial, "Compromising The Environment", concealed the cause of pollution behind an egalitarian veneer. Reality however, splashed a black contradiction on the whitewash job on two kinds of contamination:

(1) Community sewage pollution, allegedly caused by a well-heeled, well-informed majority willingly accepting danger to their health and esthetics by with-holding enough money for clean waste disposal.

(2) The majority as insecure, non-owners of the means of life, dependent on sale of their productive skills to an owning class, voting for pollution-causing investment necessary for jobs.

Back on the sewage soaked ground, it seems that the so-called municipal taxes that wage or salary earners pay are a drop in the bucket compared to tolls paid by corporations and people in the top class in society. They tolerate the mess, not through free will, but partly because they cannot afford to pay for sensible disposal.

On industrial pollution it was coldly predicted that acid rain will kill 48,000 lakes in the next 15 years. This, along with some dead ocean inlets caused by mining effluent was considered to be a worthy sacrifice for jobs in this recession plagued economy. Not noted was an estimate made by Dr. Leonard Hamilton of the Brookhaven National Laboratory in Upton, N.Y., that "about 5,000 Canadians die every year" from respiratory problems associated with the dry form of acid rain.

Many experts, including Dr. Dubridge of Cal Tech and 1969 chemistry Nobel Prize winner Sir Derek Barton of London's Imperial College, have indicated that science and technology freed to function for humanity only, would rid the earth of pollution.

It is bad enough that messing up the earth solely for profit is concealed from the majority. What takes the cake is the allusion that the shortened lives, ill health — slow suicide — is a knowledgeable decision made by that majority. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Avenue.

Labor Code

Your correspondent, K. R. Burns of James Bay, complains that he received no reply to a form letter he evidently sent us. We have no record of any personal correspondence from him on his latest subject, labor law.

Nonetheless, following his apparent query, we are in fact proud to support the Labour Code of British Columbia, and to support its related statutes as well. The questions Mr. Burns raised are covered by current labor law.

The Code was introduced by the first New Democrat government. It is widely recognized as a superb achievement in North American labor law, and has been widely praised and imitated.

The principle of this Labor Code is fair play for both sides, evenhandedness, and a system of mutual obligations on the parts of labor and management both.

Mr. Burns should be aware that the Labor Code has been altered very little by Social Credit. Although the coalition said they would re-write it when re-elected, the fact is they have not done so. Why is this? Because the Socreds now recognize what Mr. Burns should recognize: our Labor Code works. — Charles Barber, MLA Victoria.

Renaming an act

I feel I must respond to Barbara Crockford's letter on Children's Law which appeared in the July 24 Times.

Miss Crockford suggests that the government has introduced a new Family and Child Service Act to replace the Protection of Children Act and criticizes the fact that the content of the legislation remains the same.

In fact, the new Family and Child Service Act has just been introduced before the Legislature at this session.

The title of the Protection of Children Act, however, was changed on May 17 to the Family and Child Service Act, under the provisions of the Revised Statute Amendment Act (1979).

The Revised Statutes Act results from a long-term project of the Attorney-General's Ministry to consolidate and publish revised statutes for the province. The revisions are simply a renaming and renumbering of certain sections of provincial statutes, with no change in content.

The change in the title of the Protection of Children Act was made in anticipation of the introduction of the new Family and Child Service Act. This act incorporates a substantial change in focus from the present act and addresses many of the issues Miss Crockford mentions in her letter.

I hope this explanation will set the record straight about the renaming of the protection of Children Act, as there has been some misunderstanding among those who have seen the revised statute. — Grace M. McCarthy, Minister of Human Resources.

The party goes on in London

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — "Life in London is a party forever," said the Iranian who has lived here for eight years, since she first moved in with a kettle, a mattress and a racehorse. "It is a cafe society."

"I can't remember when there were so many parties," says the editor of the London society magazine, the Tatler. "I suppose people think there's no point in saving the money any more." And one of her writers, himself one of the partying set he writes about, described it ecstatically: "It's all just a mad search for fun and color."

Fun and color are not the first things that spring to mind when you think of the capital city of a country hit by recession with almost two million unemployed; and most of what one reads about the young, especially, is grim. But one section of young London is having the time of its life; and it is not inhibited by any of the world concern which worried the young in the Sixties, made them into hippies, put them in denim and demos. Then, there was egalitarianism in the air, and tales of debutantes going to elocution lessons to learn to stop talking posh.

The cold wind of the Seventies blew most of that away, and the ordinary young, too worried about jobs and prospects, seemed to their relieved parents to be coming back to sanity. But now there's a new tide flowing — at least for one small, ebullient section of young society.

There's a return to manners: someone who gave a party for 400 received thank-you letters from just about all of them. "One man who reports such things for Vogue spoke almost with tears in his eyes of the famous Feathers Ball: "The whole room in white tie and tails, the girls beautiful, everyone dancing cheek to cheek; not a drug in sight — and you're too old at 17."

The launching upon British society of a dew-bespangled debutante is not really a 1980s happening — "How can you launch a girl when she's already launched herself before she's 16?" said one mother. But some forms exist: a cocktail party at Daddy's club — Cavalry and Guards, Brooks's, Boodles — and it's real champagne again. "For several years it was just that white fizzy stuff."

In the country they do still have enormous dances at which neighbors, a la Mitford, bring a party; "but usually it's the parents' 25th and the daughters' 18th and maybe the funeral of Aunt Maudie as well because they're only going to give one."

Even the Duke of Rutland combined his son's 21st with his daughter's 17th, in a big ball at Belvoir — and he's a millionaire. Such balls can be pretty grand — one was given last autumn at another stately home at which tiaras were just about compulsory, and it was thought to usher in a new era: "You wouldn't have got a young Duchess insisting on tiaras a few years ago," said one social commentator.

In the country, too, there is more control over the young than in London: one girl was sent packing for stubbing out a cigarette on a 400-year-old lawn, and when another girl a year or two ago lit up a cigarette after the soup her hostess said icily "We seem to have finished," and led the entire party from the room. That was the end of dinner.

The juenesse doree who make up the centre of the whirlpool have a hidden but none the less intense rating system which all but the most innocent understand. You score points against for talking about money, for talking about what's in and what's not, for trying too hard and, beyond a certain point, for rudeness and getting drunk.

Points in favor come from being amusing, or very pretty, or having facilities — Daddy's jet, a vast swimming bath, a chic car. You score most points of all for who you are with. I was assured, against all disbelief, that a girl will score far higher for arriving with the right gay than for hanging on the arm of the wrong boyfriend of her own.

The young world slops over into the international jet set — Iranians have brought a lot to it. It slops over into show-biz: Orson Welles' daughter was once engaged to Dai Llewellyn, poor girl; into the media — media daughters especially seem to be central to it. But there are always plenty of people with titles to leaven the lump; few parties, I was told, were complete without Lady Cosima Vane-Tempest-Stewart, "looking as though 2,000 volts had just been passed through her."

The girls, it has to be admitted, do not have jobs that would please Germaine Greer. Bits of modelling, social journalism, snatches of fashion, a few dinners cooked for directors; some do secretarial work.

What do they use for money, these young things? "They all, without exception, say they're desperately hard up," said magazine owner David Litchfield, who resents fiercely being asked out to a birthday party, getting stuck with his share of the bill and watching all the males quarrelling noisily over who had what.

He says (shades of Graham Greene's Dr. Fischer of Geneva) that the rich will do anything for a free handout: those who despise the Playboy Club will still queue for three-quarters of an hour for free meals chez Victor Lowndes in the country.

None the less there has to be money around. One struggling Old Etonian complained that he took his girl for a hamburger and then a couple of drinks at Tramp and the evening cost $128. Flats cost upwards of $230 a week, however many other bright young things you cram in. Cocaine, too, is expensive. "I'm wretched to say," says one party-giver, "that parents often take the line they used to take about cannabis — so long as he's not on heroin I don't mind."

At something like $1,600 an ounce you wouldn't have thought many could afford it, but apart from the slightly sinister figures who are known to push it around, there are plenty who can.

There is also "this great tide of bills wafting across the roof-tops to come to rest on Father" — and, of course, overdrafts. No one has yet quite succeeded in designing the tax-loss son to match the tax-loss farm, but many an affluent Papa has come extremely near it.

Is it just frivolity, a carefree stage that at another social level is giggles in the cinema, new wave music or too much wine? Or does it all represent the tip of some huge submerged mountain of privilege, some real advantage that those who have all this now will consolidate into an even more glittering future?

There's no doubt that those who are going to marry people with a lot of money will find them, in this world, and in this way; that when in later years they're all stockbrokers and bankers and lawyers or running the family estates, it won't hurt to have made friends with others of their ilk. Anything that creates a network is going to be of some use to some people — but it's unlikely the gilded youth of Britain are as enclosed as even, say, the Poppers of Germany (devoted to being gentlemen), let alone the young Ivy Leaguers of the American East Coast.

What is certain is that these young have abandoned the pretence of being have-nots and are being as gay, ebullient and decorative as they were in the Thirties — when Britain also had a strong pound and two million unemployed.

It's worth remembering, though, that some cracker-barrel American sage once said after he had listened to tales of the glittering doings of New York's cafe society for some time. He took his corncob pipe out of his mouth, spat, and said, "In New York, you may be cafe society. Back home, you're just the town drunk."

Swallows gather

They were gone, and I hadn't missed them.

Worse still, they must have been gone for a month and I still hadn't missed them.

It's always this way in summer; I seem to lose my "eye" for change, an eye that serves me well at any other time of year. Now fall was beginning to make its presence felt — despite some very summery temperatures — and my "eye" for change was coming back to life.

For the better part of two months, almost any activity in the back yard had been done to the accompaniment of the cheerful chatter of Violet-green Swallows and Barn Swallows. Now, except for the soft sounds of sparrows and warblers skulking about in my shrubs, there was silence.

The Violet-greens, as they have done for three years now, had a home in the gable end of the garage; the Barns had theirs somewhere next door. Now, all were gone.

It's not that they'd left the country. No, they'd be around for a while yet — particularly the Barn Swallows — but unless a few just happened to fly over the house, I'd have to go looking for them if I want to see these, or any other swallows, at this time of year.

There is no surer sign of fall in these parts than the gathering of the swallows. Almost anywhere a good reliable supply of food is to be found, often as early as late July, these gatherings begin to form. As each new family gets on the wing, it joins one of these gatherings and, as August moves along, the gatherings grow. By September, especially in favored places, they sometimes become immense.

A casual glance might leave one believing these gatherings were made up entirely of Barn Swallows. A closer look might reveal that almost all the kinds of swallows found regularly in this part of the country were there. A real close look, the kind reserved for the perfectionists among us, might turn up a rarity for Victoria — a Bank Swallow.

But Bank Swallows are something to be looked for; they won't often be found. What will be found will be the aforementioned Violet-green and Barn Swallows, as well as Cliff, Tree, and Rough-winged Swallows. Our biggest swallow and, incidentally, now a very rare bird on southern Vancouver Island, the Purple Martin, seldom joins these gatherings.

One of the best places to check out an autumn gathering of swallows near Victoria is at Quick's Bottom on Markham Road. There, on any given day between now and the end of the month, a little diligent looking should turn up at least five kinds of swallow. But you'll have to look carefully because, as I said earlier, at first glance, they'll all seem to be Barn Swallows.

It is interesting to look at one of these gatherings and speculate on where its various members might be once winter sets in because, by September, most of them will be on their way south. And, as might be expected of such marvellous flyers as swallows, some of them will go a long way.

The hardier among them, Tree Swallows and Violet-greens, often winter along the coast in the southern United States. A few of the latter have been known to winter even in our latitudes. But these two species are the exception; the others have long trips ahead of them.

For example, the Rough-winged Swallow is not normally found north of Mexico in winter and more often chooses Central America for its winter sojourn; Purple Martins exchange our rocky highlands for the forests of the Amazon in Brazil; and Barn and Cliff Swallows may not stop until they've reached Argentina — the latter with a stop-over at San Juan Capistrano, just to keep their record intact.

A bit humbling, isn't it?

The backyard barbecue

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — What manner of creature is this all covered with pink welts?

What! You cannot identify it? Look again. Yes, yes, you are warm, very warm. It does appear to be a giant mosquito bite. Actually, it is a composition made up of many, many little mosquito bites distributed skilfully on a human torso. Note the beautifully stitched circle of small welts twined around the ankles and the charmingly curved spray of inflamed welts just there behind the right shoulder where the torso's desperately flailing, scratching hand cannot reach them. Note the dozen pink welts laced like a bracelet around the wrist to which the scratching hand is attached.

You may ask: Where does one go to be transformed into a giant mosquito bite? This torso, thus transformed, went to Buckley's annual backyard barbecue. Whether the condition can be achieved anywhere else outside the Everglades I cannot say, but at Buckley's annual backyard barbecue it is a cinch.

The torso is the fleshly property of a male American named Dudley. He goes every year to Buckley's backyard barbecue, along with Berkeley, Coakley, Midgely, Sibley and Hadley, accompanied by their wives, nee Woodley, Finchley, Benchley, Hundley, Twilley and Quigley.

As you can tell from their custom of attending backyard barbecues, all are middle-class, ranging in income from the grand bourgeoisie down to the bourgeoisie a la mode, which is the mosquito's favorite dessert.

Let us tell the truth about Dudley. In recent years he has lost his zest for being transformed into a giant mosquito bite. This year, in fact, he told his wife, nee Webley, that he didn't think he would accept the invitation. He said he had begun to doubt that being middle class was as satisfying as Karl Marx thought it was.

Word that Dudley might not attend cast Buckley into profound depression. It depressed Buckley's mosquitoes even more severely. Buckley's barbecue had become the home office of mosquitoes, and Buckley was fearful that if guests stopped coming to the annual backyard barbecue the mosquitoes would become unhappy and move their headquarters elsewhere, the way whole companies move out of Manhattan because they think that gravy is richer in somebody else's backyard.

Dudley did not like being thought of as gravy. When Buckley told him the mosquitoes would be disappointed if he failed to show up, Dudley, who is not very original, stole an idea from Marie Antoinette and said, "Let them eat Berkeley, Coakley, Midgely, Sibley and Hadley as well as the former maidens Woodley, Finchley, Benchley, Hundley, Twilley and Quigley."

The fact is that Dudley secretly yearned for the bad old days before poisonous insect sprays were prohibited and he could stand happily among the prostrate remains of Buckley's mosquitoes and eat his barbecue in triumph, a symbol of man's superiority to tiny little nuisances.

He confessed as much one night to Mrs. Dudley, nee Bartleby. She accused him of being an enemy of the ecology. Was he such an imbecile that he did not know that sprays which killed Buckley's mosquitoes would be eaten by cattle which would be eaten by him, Dudley, at next year's backyard barbecue, with results too dreadful to describe?

Was he totally unaware that a sound ecology required a balance of natural forces and that removing Buckley's mosquitoes from the scales would upset the balance and change the entire structure of life on earth? Look at what had happened since the smallpox organism had been wiped out by man: a whole generation of children was growing up who would never know what it was to have big scabs on their upper arms.

Dudley was shamed into doing his duty to the ecology. Thus, when Buckley drew up his annual menu the mosquitoes cheered when they saw that it would offer the usual Dudley course. Many, of course, paid the last true measure of devotion to the ecology, for though deadly sprays were forbidden there was no regulation forbidding Dudley to use his swatting hand.

At one point, in fact, he swatted himself on the forehead so vigorously that he was dazed for several minutes, during which mosquitoes turned from the combative Berkeley, Coakley, Midgely, Sibley, Hadley and Buckley and settled on his inert torso in a mass demonstration of affection for his contributions to the ecological balance.

Such are the pleasures, such are the duties of the cuisine bourgeoisie.

THE SIDNEY REVIEW

A new and growing commercial printing company and a long established weekly newspaper require a person to assume the responsible position as Comptroller to both organizations. Reporting to the Managing Director the Comptroller will be assisted by one additional accounting staff member and by computerized accounting.

This is a 'hands-on' position in two expanding companies; duties will include all normal accounting functions, cash and credit management, and the opportunity to develop new systems and procedures with the new company.

Ideally the successful candidate will have formal accounting training, and previous experience in manufacturing, preferably in the commercial printing industry. Familiarity with computerized accounting and ability to communicate would be an asset.

Salary will be commensurate with experience and qualification. Please submit a written resume in strictest confidence to:

Advice given to bend rules

court Judge Rene Marin, that he had only distributed the paper as a teaching aid to a training session for postal investigators he had prepared six years ago.

Foster denied using the recommendation himself and said he was proud of the training given postal inspectors.

Jack Prescott, Western regional manager of the post office, defended the post office proposal to establish a postal police force, saying opponents to it are the same kinds of folks who worry about what is happening to the whales.

He said he did not share the concern over the possible proliferation of policemen.

In a section on legal counsel, the 1974 training paper says a person should be allowed to contact his lawyer any time.

"It must be stated, however, that if he does contact a lawyer, your chances of obtaining a confession are very poor. Any lawyer worth his salt will caution his client immediately not to provide a statement or give you any information whatsoever.

"For this reason, any request he makes in this regard should be discouraged."

The paper suggests an interrogator might refer to wasting money on high-priced help and gradually lead the suspect away from the thought of seeking legal counsel.

Suspects should not be treated unfairly or harshly, it says, and only one interrogator should be there, or at least out of sight and within hearing distance.

"Our investigator's manual stipulates that two should be present," the paper says, then goes on to say the rule should be broken.

Next step is to put the suspect into a co-operative frame of mind.

Put him at ease, speak to him man-to-man, show an interest in him as an individual and, "don't paint too bleak a picture of the crime," it suggests. Instead of saying, "stealing from the mails" say "taking the odd letter," the paper counsels.

"Regardless of whether you have a strong case or not, it is imperative that you convince the accused you do have," it says.

The paper then lists several methods of playing on a suspect's fears of publicity, of going to jail and of effects on family and friends, while at the same time overcoming any belief on the suspect's part that the interrogator is bluffing.

Then it launches into explanations of techniques that might be used to extract a confession, such as:

The Heaven or Hell Technique: telling the suspect that if he confesses there may be little publicity (heaven) or that he is in a mess (hell).

The Exaggeration: enlarging on the severity of the offence so a suspect will admit to a lesser deed. "This strategy may prove effective against the average subject but should not be attempted with a person with a high degree of intelligence."

The Flattery Technique: "We sure had a time figuring how you did it, Tom. . . Boy, I've been investigating these things for years and that was the neatest piece of work I've seen."

The Behavior Symptom: "Suspects, whether guilty or not, will show signs of being nervous." Among them are blushing, sweating, blinking of the eyes or many other physical changes.

Chemical leak in museum

City firemen cordoned off the underground garage at the Provincial Museum Thursday afternoon after employees working in the basement reported a chemical leak of an unknown substance.

Firemen donned protective garb and oxygen masks and after a short search found the source — a leaking five-gallon container of formaldehyde.

A fire department spokesman said museum staff didn't know at first what the leaking substance was and decided to play it safe.

Formeldehyde is used in embalming and as a preservative for dead animals.

A high enough concentration could make a person dizzy or cause a mild upset.

takeover. As of Thursday night, BCFP added $1 this week to $17.50, Doman added 75 cents to $11.25, and Whonnock settled at $14, up a quarter, after having traded near the $15 level.

Rayonier operates three sawmills in the Vancouver area, pulp mills at Port Alice on Vancouver Island and Woodfibre on the Sechelt peninsula north of Vancouver and has extensive logging operations throughout the province.

The sale is subject to departmental approvals by the B.C. government and by the boards of directors of the individual companies.

B.C. Forest Products is a fully-integrated forest products company with operations and investments in B.C., Alberta, Quebec and in the U.S.

Doman and Whonnock are major West Coast lumber producers with operations in coastal B.C. and on Vancouver Island.

ITT Industries also is involved in manufacturing automotive parts, telecommunications equipment, industrial products, insurance services and Sheraton hotels.

In Victoria, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said it is a positive move to have the repatriation of part of our forest industry which has been controlled by an American company.

"The ministry will have to assess implications as far as corporate domination, regional concentration — that type of thing — and what plans they have for the various plants that ITT-Rayonier now operate," he said.

Waterland said he hoped there wouldn't be any reduction in the workforce as a result of the takeover.

VSE shatters trading record

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver stock exchange shattered the $2-billion mark in share value transactions Thursday and has already surpassed the annual volume mark established last year. A total of 6,207,970 shares traded Thursday.

A value record was established last year of $1.4 billion, said Mark Foreman, a spokesman for the exchange.

In 1979, there were 912 million shares traded and already 922 million have been traded so far this year. Financing raised through the exchange has also hit a record $119 million compared with $104 million last year.

Foreman said the exchange will have to average $11 million in value a day to break the $3-billion mark by the end of the year. Market activity has been buoyant, averaging five million shares a day.

There has been no particular reason for the greatly increased activity and all areas have experienced growth, he said.

Trend: one newspaper per city

EDMONTON (CP) — The future is not bright for two newspapers competing in a city, says the chairman of Canada's largest newspaper group, which includes both of Victoria's dailies.

Ken Thomson, head of the Thomson newspaper empire, said Wednesday the costs of starting newspapers and operating them in a competitive market make it unlikely many cities could support more than one paper.

"People don't realize how expensive it is to produce newspapers," Thomson, in Edmonton to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, said in an interview.

"The economics in North America are very tough. There are very few markets that could support two newspapers."

The Thomson group owns more than 50 newspapers in Canada, more than 70 in the United States and several in Britain.

Thomson said newspapers most likely to succeed in competitive markets are tabloids, such as the new Calgary Sun, that concentrate heavily on short local stories, "and maybe even a little sensationalism."

The Sun replaced the Calgary Albertan this month after Thomson sold The Albertan to the Toronto Sun. The Sun is to be in competition with the much-larger Calgary Herald, owned by Southam Inc.

Thomson said his company decided not to operate The Albertan soon after obtaining it in a takeover of FP Publications Ltd. in January.

Before the takeover, he said, "we weren't very knowledgeable on details.

"It didn't take long for us to figure out the picture in Calgary wasn't going to be very good.

Trend: one newspaper per city

EDMONTON (CP) — The future is not bright for two newspapers competing in a city, says the chairman of Canada's largest newspaper group, which includes both of Victoria's dailies.

Ken Thomson, head of the Thomson newspaper empire, said Wednesday the costs of starting newspapers and operating them in a competitive market make it unlikely many cities could support more than one paper.

"People don't realize how expensive it is to produce newspapers," Thomson, in Edmonton to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, said in an interview.

"The economics in North America are very tough. There are very few markets that could support two newspapers."

The Thomson group owns more than 50 newspapers in Canada, more than 70 in the United States and several in Britain.

Thomson said newspapers most likely to succeed in competitive markets are tabloids, such as the new Calgary Sun, that concentrate heavily on short local stories, "and maybe even a little sensationalism."

The Sun replaced the Calgary Albertan this month after Thomson sold The Albertan to the Toronto Sun. The Sun is to be in competition with the much-larger Calgary Herald, owned by Southam Inc.

Thomson said his company decided not to operate The Albertan soon after obtaining it in a takeover of FP Publications Ltd. in January.

Before the takeover, he said, "we weren't very knowledgeable on details.

"It didn't take long for us to figure out the picture in Calgary wasn't going to be very good.

Trend: one newspaper per city

EDMONTON (CP) — The future is not bright for two newspapers competing in a city, says the chairman of Canada's largest newspaper group, which includes both of Victoria's dailies.

Ken Thomson, head of the Thomson newspaper empire, said Wednesday the costs of starting newspapers and operating them in a competitive market make it unlikely many cities could support more than one paper.

"People don't realize how expensive it is to produce newspapers," Thomson, in Edmonton to attend a meeting of the board of directors of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, said in an interview.

"The economics in North America are very tough. There are very few markets that could support two newspapers."

The Thomson group owns more than 50 newspapers in Canada, more than 70 in the United States and several in Britain.

Thomson said newspapers most likely to succeed in competitive markets are tabloids, such as the new Calgary Sun, that concentrate heavily on short local stories, "and maybe even a little sensationalism."

The Sun replaced the Calgary Albertan this month after Thomson sold The Albertan to the Toronto Sun. The Sun is to be in competition with the much-larger Calgary Herald, owned by Southam Inc.

Thomson said his company decided not to operate The Albertan soon after obtaining it in a takeover of FP Publications Ltd. in January.

Before the takeover, he said, "we weren't very knowledgeable on details.

"It didn't take long for us to figure out the picture in Calgary wasn't going to be very good.

VSE shatters trading record

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver stock exchange shattered the $2-billion mark in share value transactions Thursday and has already surpassed the annual volume mark established last year. A total of 6,207,970 shares traded Thursday.

A value record was established last year of $1.4 billion, said Mark Foreman, a spokesman for the exchange.

In 1979, there were 912 million shares traded and already 922 million have been traded so far this year. Financing raised through the exchange has also hit a record $119 million compared with $104 million last year.

Foreman said the exchange will have to average $11 million in value a day to break the $3-billion mark by the end of the year. Market activity has been buoyant, averaging five million shares a day.

There has been no particular reason for the greatly increased activity and all areas have experienced growth, he said.

Advice given to bend rules

court Judge Rene Marin, that he had only distributed the paper as a teaching aid to a training session for postal investigators he had prepared six years ago.

Foster denied using the recommendation himself and said he was proud of the training given postal inspectors.

Jack Prescott, Western regional manager of the post office, defended the post office proposal to establish a postal police force, saying opponents to it are the same kinds of folks who worry about what is happening to the whales.

He said he did not share the concern over the possible proliferation of policemen.

In a section on legal counsel, the 1974 training paper says a person should be allowed to contact his lawyer any time.

"It must be stated, however, that if he does contact a lawyer, your chances of obtaining a confession are very poor. Any lawyer worth his salt will caution his client immediately not to provide a statement or give you any information whatsoever.

"For this reason, any request he makes in this regard should be discouraged."

The paper suggests an interrogator might refer to wasting money on high-priced help and gradually lead the suspect away from the thought of seeking legal counsel.

Suspects should not be treated unfairly or harshly, it says, and only one interrogator should be there, or at least out of sight and within hearing distance.

"Our investigator's manual stipulates that two should be present," the paper says, then goes on to say the rule should be broken.

Next step is to put the suspect into a co-operative frame of mind.

Put him at ease, speak to him man-to-man, show an interest in him as an individual and, "don't paint too bleak a picture of the crime," it suggests. Instead of saying, "stealing from the mails" say "taking the odd letter," the paper counsels.

"Regardless of whether you have a strong case or not, it is imperative that you convince the accused you do have," it says.

The paper then lists several methods of playing on a suspect's fears of publicity, of going to jail and of effects on family and friends, while at the same time overcoming any belief on the suspect's part that the interrogator is bluffing.

Then it launches into explanations of techniques that might be used to extract a confession, such as:

The Heaven or Hell Technique: telling the suspect that if he confesses there may be little publicity (heaven) or that he is in a mess (hell).

The Exaggeration: enlarging on the severity of the offence so a suspect will admit to a lesser deed. "This strategy may prove effective against the average subject but should not be attempted with a person with a high degree of intelligence."

The Flattery Technique: "We sure had a time figuring how you did it, Tom. . . Boy, I've been investigating these things for years and that was the neatest piece of work I've seen."

The Behavior Symptom: "Suspects, whether guilty or not, will show signs of being nervous." Among them are blushing, sweating, blinking of the eyes or many other physical changes.

Chemical leak in museum

City firemen cordoned off the underground garage at the Provincial Museum Thursday afternoon after employees working in the basement reported a chemical leak of an unknown substance.

Firemen donned protective garb and oxygen masks and after a short search found the source — a leaking five-gallon container of formaldehyde.

A fire department spokesman said museum staff didn't know at first what the leaking substance was and decided to play it safe.

Formeldehyde is used in embalming and as a preservative for dead animals.

A high enough concentration could make a person dizzy or cause a mild upset.

takeover. As of Thursday night, BCFP added $1 this week to $17.50, Doman added 75 cents to $11.25, and Whonnock settled at $14, up a quarter, after having traded near the $15 level.

Rayonier operates three sawmills in the Vancouver area, pulp mills at Port Alice on Vancouver Island and Woodfibre on the Sechelt peninsula north of Vancouver and has extensive logging operations throughout the province.

The sale is subject to departmental approvals by the B.C. government and by the boards of directors of the individual companies.

B.C. Forest Products is a fully-integrated forest products company with operations and investments in B.C., Alberta, Quebec and in the U.S.

Doman and Whonnock are major West Coast lumber producers with operations in coastal B.C. and on Vancouver Island.

ITT Industries also is involved in manufacturing automotive parts, telecommunications equipment, industrial products, insurance services and Sheraton hotels.

In Victoria, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said it is a positive move to have the repatriation of part of our forest industry which has been controlled by an American company.

"The ministry will have to assess implications as far as corporate domination, regional concentration — that type of thing — and what plans they have for the various plants that ITT-Rayonier now operate," he said.

Waterland said he hoped there wouldn't be any reduction in the workforce as a result of the takeover.

Loved him in Lethbridge but he bombed in Brandon

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Doug Christie is tired but confident, apprehensive yet hopeful.

One of the west's foremost proponents of western independence, Christie recently completed a four-week swing through the western provinces, drawing mostly small but (according to Christie) enthusiastic audiences.

Despite the limited response, however, the Victoria lawyer and his two aides — Don French and Paul Pappajohn — feel they're on the brink of something great.

Although they're not sure what rocks lie below that precipice, they're sufficiently sure of the righteousness of their cause to urge us all to leap.

Their cause is independence and their group is the Western Canada Concept, formed when the Western National Association fell victim to internal dissension.

Christie, 34, a founding member of the WNA, and a core of loyal followers decided it was best to separate themselves from the WNA because of some of the people that group had attracted.

There were suggestions the Ku Klux Klan and other groups considered unsuitable by Christie and his supporters had infiltrated the WNA.

On Dominion Day, under a new name and with new hope, Christie set forth to convert the west.

But he and his backers showed remarkable naivete in planning the tour. Without an advance man there was little or no notice to the media along Christie's route of his impending appearances.

The result was poor coverage of his small successes but wide distribution of such debacles as the Brandon meeting.

Two people showed up.

Canadian Press sent a picture across the country of a dejected Christie sitting alone in a corner of a Brandon University hall.

A wire story chronicled the Winnipeg meeting which attracted only eight people.

Another wirephoto showed Christie being confronted by two Medicine Hat police officers who told the western separatist he couldn't speak in a public park without a permit.

Christie packed up and left.

There was no explanation why there was little or no coverage of what could be called normal turnouts for a political meeting. Some of the crowds could perhaps be considered even exceptional considering the searing heat of a Prairie July.

In Lethbridge he drew 275. There were 75 at the Penticton and Regina gatherings, 65 in Saskatoon and Edmonton.

For those meetings, there was some advance notice in newspapers.

But where communication broke down, as in Brandon and Winnipeg, attendance figures withered.

What is Christie after?

His Western Canada Concept is promoting full economic and political independence for Western Canada and Christie acknowledges the real possibility the cause could soon be usurped by Social Credit's Premier Bill Bennett who has recently made separatist noises.

But it doesn't concern him. He says if he approves of the brand of independence or separatism offered, he'll throw in his support. If he doesn't, he'll continue to thump his own political drum.

While Christie and his supporters are enthusiastic about the prospects for western independence, it appears obvious they're going to need professional help if their message is to get any serious or meaningful media exposure.

French is convinced that any westerner who hears Christie give his reasons for separation will be converted to the cause.

On tour, Christie appealed to westerners to fight the "rape of the west by the east" with the threat of separation.

Independence is "the only tool for developing the west's resources for the people living here," he said. "But if you don't care, or you don't think you have the power to change things, you won't."

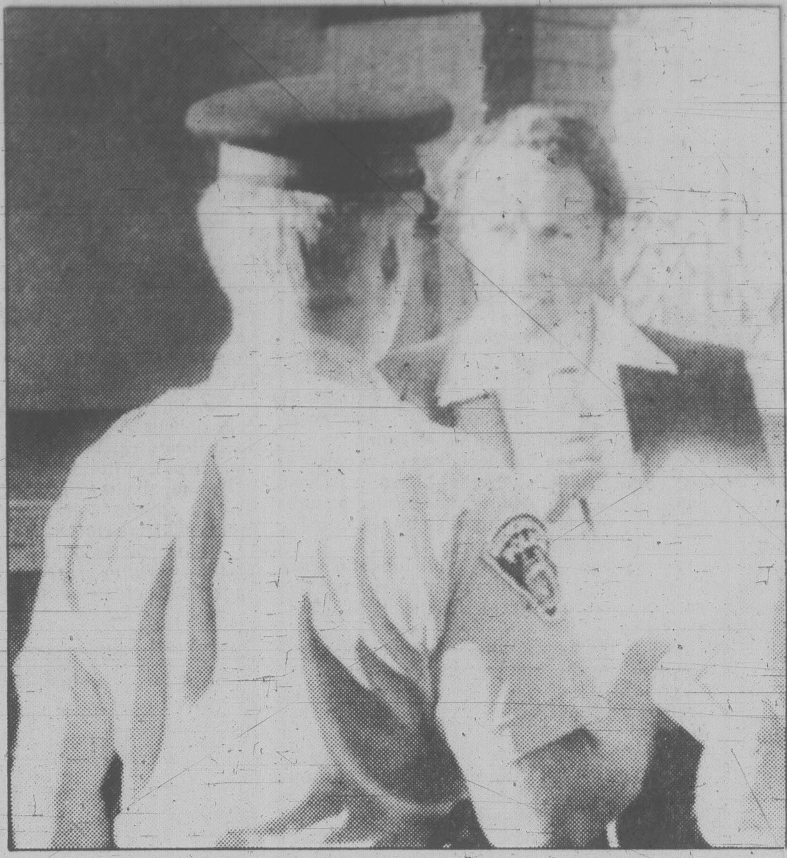
Christie said the federal government works for the interests of Ontario and Quebec. Therefore, westerners will have to fight to keep the benefits of their own resources because they have no effective voice in Ottawa.

If the benefits from resource development do not remain in the west "we will become as the Maritimes now are when our resources are depleted."

A letter distributed by Christie asked the western premiers to demand several guarantees for the west during upcoming constitutional talks. It warned if nothing is done the powers used to exploit the west will be entrenched in the constitution.

The letter called for complete benefits from resource revenues, free trade for the western provinces, an end to official bilingualism, regional control of immigration to the west, an end to equalization payments and regional representation in a reformed Senate and Supreme Court equal to the west's productive contribution to federal revenues.

If these demands are not met a referendum for independence should be held and the western premiers should start negotiations to form a new nation of Western Canada, Christie says.



No speeches in the park without a permit, Christie was told by police in Medicine Hat

TOWN TALK

University of Victoria education professor Dr. John Downing has been appointed to the research committee of the National Council of Teachers of English.

The announcement from NCTE in Urbana, Ill., says the professional organization wants to increase the effectiveness of teaching the language and its literature in the schools and colleges of North America.

Judging from the announcement, the NCTE public information office would be a good place to start the research.

It has a sentence containing 87 words, four commas, two semi-colons and three bracketed numerals.

Over to you, John.

You don't see many Bentleys these days.

One of the rare — only 100 were ever made — 1930 classics surfaced recently in Victoria where it was lovingly tuned by Rolls-Royce expert Roger Ford at Autohaus.

The car was purchased from an eccentric old Canadian navy captain by Clarendon Carriage Co. Ltd. of London for a price rumored to be more than $70,000.

Sound mechanically after four years of non-use, the car was shipped to England the other day for about $25,000 worth of body and interior restoration.

It gets five miles per gallon but then anyone who can afford it isn't going to worry about the price of fuel.

The price of real estate these days has gone right out of this world. But the farther out you go, the cheaper it gets.

For $25 you can buy a square kilometre of Mars or the Moon as part of a protest campaign by the Victoria-based North American Interplanetary Society, which opposes the signing of a UN-sponsored Moon Treaty.

According to Tim Lomas, NAIS director, only five signatories are required before the treaty comes into force, and France and Bolivia have adopted it. Lomas fears Canada may be third.

But don't expect to borrow money at the bank on the strength of your title deed to Moonscape — the document, map, photographs and instructions you will get for $25 are sold as a novelty only.

Further information and a copy of the Moon Treaty ($1) may be obtained from NAIS, 150 Montreal St., Victoria, V8V 1Y8.

Tourism Minister Pat Jordan gets some strange requests for help.

But one recently from a Montreal-based movie company, International Cinema Corporation, takes the prize for most difficult to fulfil.

The company has written to Jordan asking for her help in locating a slew of boats including a pre-1840 two-masted sailing ship, some genuine birchbark canoes and some "York" river boats similar to those used by the Hudson Bay Company around the turn of the century.

The boats are needed for a movie called "Trail Blazers," a western drama set in the 1820s.

If the company can't find the real McCoy they are hoping to find a craftsman who can build the boats.

Anyone who can provide assistance should contact the ministry's film promotion office in Vancouver.

For what it's worth, in the contest for official municipal flower, the white fawn lily is the runaway leader with 178 votes compared to 38 for the honeysuckle, 29 for the western columbine and 26 for the calypso orchid.

The voting ends on Aug. 31. and if you haven't voted yet, ballots are available at the Panorama Leisure Centre and the library next to Sanscha Hall.

Police get out razors

Greater Victoria police shaved and went back into uniform today after ratifying a new contract which gives them an increase in wages and fringe benefits averaging about 20 per cent over two years.

The 190 police who work for Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt voted Thursday night to accept the new contract, following earlier ratification by the member municipalities of the GVLRA.

Carl Anshelm, chief negotiator of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, said today a first-class constable will go to a monthly salary of $2,317 by July 1, 1981 in several stages.

The contract, retroactive to Dec. 31, 1979, will give first-class constables an immediate pay raise to $2,053. Next increase will be Jan. 1, 1981 to $2,207.

The present wage rate for first-class constables under the old contract — which expired at the end of 1979 — was $1,845 a month.

Some fringe benefits are also improved. There will be premium pay as an incentive to qualify for higher classifications.

For example, Anshelm said a first-class constable who qualifies for sergeant and enters a promotion list for the next vacancy will get an extra three per cent.

"It's a chance to better their qualifications," he said.

"There is standardization of clothes and dry cleaning allowances and shift differential among the four core municipal police departments, Anshelm added.

Hours of work remain the same, but vacations have been improved.

One year's employment will still entitle a policeman to three weeks' holiday after one year, but to qualify for four weeks he'll need only eight years instead of 10 as before. That will be cut to seven years in 1981.

Sgt. Bryan Bailey, president of the Victoria Police Association, said the 130 city police very reluctantly gave approval to the contract which standardizes wages and fringe benefits for Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich peace officers.

"There is very real concern about the second year," Bailey said.

"There is concern with the lack of fringe benefits we enjoy when they are compared to those of other public sector unions."

Esquimalt police voted 11-6 to accept the contract. Bailey wouldn't reveal the Victoria figures. Saanich police still have a year to run on their contract, but they were included in the negotiations under a reopener clause to cover certain items.

Sidney dog killed with bow and arrow

The Victoria SPCA is investigating the bow and arrow killing of a dog in Sidney earlier this week.

Victoria SPCA manager Joseph Heald said today the dog, a St. Bernard, was shot in the chest with an arrow last Sunday.

Heald was unable to give details but said the incident apparently involved a bitch that was in heat.

The five-year-old male St. Bernard, a family pet, died some hours after the shooting in a neighbor's yard.

The dog's owner said on Thursday the bitch was enclosed in a pen with a 10-foot high fence and her St. Bernard could not have got in to the pen.

She said the man told her later he was having problems with dogs bothering his bitch.

Heald could not say if charges will be laid.

Under the Criminal Code, anyone who wilfully kills a dog is guilty of an offence punishable by a maximum $2,000 fine or six months in jail or both.

A Sidney bylaw also prohibits the discharge of any firearm within the municipality. Crossbows and longbows are included in the definition of firearms.

Beer drinkers can soak it up at the ball game

Baseball and beer go together — for the time being at least at Royal Athletic Park.

While the lockout of brewery workers has caused beer supplies to dwindle elsewhere, the city-owned facility still has large stocks, city council learned Thursday night.

Ald. Bill McElroy said he wasn't delivering a commercial for suds in the stands, but "if you want a cold beer on a hot Saturday" the stadium is the place.

Ald. Gretchen Brewin wondered if there was any beer left at Royal Athletic Park as council approved a 30-day trial for beer drinking anywhere in the stands.

McElroy replied: "If you knew our city recreation director (Jack Morgan) . . ."

'We're competitive' —Airwest

Airwest Airlines today said its Victoria-Vancouver fares have remained competitive despite sharp increases during the past 12 months.

"Our rates are about the same as Air Canada and Pacific Western Airlines on the route between the two cities," president Al Michaud said.

He was responding to a statement Thursday by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele who said Airwest needs competition to keep its fares from rising too sharply.

The company was purchased by Jim Pattison in March, 1979, and its return fare was increased from $56 to $80 in 12 months.

(The present return fare for Air Canada is $80 and for PWA $78.)

"We have not lost any customers that I know of because of our $80 return fare. In fact, our business is increasing."

Hopefully, he said, the rates could be stabilized at or near present levels.

However, the company is holding its quarterly meeting today and profits are below expectations.

"We are discussing all aspects of the operation, including the rates."

He said Airwest's fares should be slightly higher than Air Canada and PWA because the land-based planes also involve limousine costs to go from downtown to downtown.

Airwest's recent cost increases, he said, included a doubling of fuel expenses in the past year and a 28 per cent increase in salaries.

The Victoria-Vancouver run is in healthy condition but some other routes were not paying as well and the company had to consider the over-all financial impact in setting rates.

Pattison owns Airwest Airlines and West Coast Air, which is being merged into the Airwest service.

Michaud is president of both air lines.

He's a legend in own mind

He should have been a counterman in a Brooklyn deli. His booming voice would have cut the lunchtime clamor like a meat slicer through corned beef.

Instead, Howard Cosell whet his tongue on America's pastimes to become the self-proclaimed "greatest sportscaster of all time," and a legend in his own mind.

Cosell, beginning his second decade as the overlord of ABC Monday-Night Football, has made himself a millionaire announcer, best-selling author, Ivy League lecturer and the most loved and loathed figure in broadcasting — America's foghorn in a sea of sports.

His disaster-prone vocabulary and lugubrious cadence make him an easy mark for mimics. His detractors have called him everything from His Royal Heinous to The National Irritant.

Cosell rises to the baiting like a hell-bent-for-prosecution attorney: "I'm the finest sports journalist in the world today. Who are the people who say these things? I'll tell you who they are. Sportwriters. What the hell do they know?"

His wife says he's "insecure," a man driven by an unrequited relationship with the Great American Audience.

"I think he wants to be universally loved," says Emmy Cosell. Even after these years, criticism "tears him up."

"Dandy" Don Meredith, his Texas sidekick in the Monday football booth says, "He's really a character, and amazing guy. His delivery is such that he says things, and you don't really question whether it's true or not."

"He's a great entertainer," says Meredith, sidestepping the charge that Cosell's performance is crippled by his lack of personal athletic experience.

But the term "entertainer" wouldn't sit well with Cosell. "People think you've got to be a jock to be an announcer. Do you send a arsonist to cover arson? Do you send a murderer to cover a murder? Hell, I'm a journalist," he repeats. "I love it, Goddamn, I love it."

In his best-selling book, "Cosell on Cosell," he says he developed the "abstract interview, replete with provocative questions concerning human personality, (which) produces answers that are timeless. Good Yesterday, good today, good next year, good forever." The microphone had met its match.

Indeed, the Cosell interviews are his trademark. Cosell and Don Drysdale. Cosell and Floyd Patterson. Cosell and Joe Namath. Cosell and Sonny Liston.

Cosell and Sugar Ray Leonard. On July 19 Cosell and Leonard watched a filmed rerun of Leonard's 15-round title bout with Roberto Duran. The interview that followed, Cosell claims, was "the greatest piece of sports journalism in the history of the medium."

But it's another fighter who comes to mind when the name Howard Cosell is mentioned: Muhammad Ali.

For nearly 20 years Cosell has trailed Ali through his religious conversion, his change of name, his ranting and ravings, his championship bouts. Ali says he made Cosell. Cosell says he made Ali. It's the sporting world's chicken-and-egg debate.

In fact, they helped make each other, symbiotic superegos who parlayed controversy into prime-time paydays.

Despite closeness of their careers, at least on camera, Cosell balks when he is asked if he and Ali are friends.

"Ali is not a friend. He was never a friend. That's a matter of mutuality of respect. What could we possible have in common? I'm an intellectual. Ali today is virtually an illiterate."

Cosell knows his future is uncertain. He is 60 now, and his hand trembles as he chain-smokes. The corporate chiefains at ABC, he says, "have great respect for me. But they would't hestitate to drop me tomorrow. People don't matter. There are only ratings."

When he dies, he'd like his epitaph to read: I'm a moral, honest, hard-working and deeply devoted family man."

And when the camera takes its last look at Cosell, he predicts it will never see another one like him.

"In the strictures and structures of the broadcast industry there probably won't be anyone to take my place. They probably won't allow it. I was a freak who happened along, criticizing, commisioners, excoriating the NCAA and everything in that horrible syndrome. They don't want to rock the boat. I've rocked the boat too long."

Irish in fourth straight final

Victoria Shamrocks are in final round of the Western Lacrosse Association playoff series for the fourth straight year.

And now, depending on what happens in Coquitlam on Saturday night between the Adanacs and New Westminster Salmonbellies, their future fortunes rest.

The Irish made the finals Thursday night at Vancouver's Kerrisdale Arena with an 18-12 victory over Vancouver Burrards to win their best-of-seven semi-final series 4-2.

In the other semi-final series, New Westminster Salmonbellies continued their remarkable comeback with their third straight victory over league-champion Coquitlam Adanacs after dropping the first three games.

Salmonbellies thrashed the injury-riddled Adanacs 17-7 at Queens Park to force a deciding game and what could be a storybook finish.

Shamrocks won the league playoff championship the last two years, lost in the Mann Cup finals in Peterborough in 1978 and defeated Peterborough Red Oaks four straight in last year's national final in Victoria. In 1977 they lost to Burrards in the final.

Burrards took an early 3-0 lead over the Shamrocks Thursday and then took seven straight penalties. Shamrocks took advantage and went ahead 5-3 and then 6-4.

The game was tied 6-6 after the first period but Victoria took control in the second, jumping to a 13-8 lead going into the final frame.

Burrards scored the first four goals of the third period and the Rocks the final five.

Teams had been warned prior to the game by officials that the game would be called according to the book. It was. Burrards got 43 minutes in penalties. Victoria was tagged with only 19 minutes.

Shamrocks got four goals from league scoring champion Kevin Alexander and three from Dan Green. Norm Baker and Mike Game each scored twice, while Andy Reid, Jim Boyd, Dave Lowdon, Chris Hall, Rick Baker, Tarey Pollock and Rhys Wickes each had single tallies.

Dan Perreault led Burrards with three goals, while John Swan, Stu Aird and Doug Hayes each scored twice. Mike Holden, Mike Smith and Ron Pinder added singles for Vancouver who made their exit from the playoffs.

Larry Smeltzer was outstanding in goal for Victoria making 45 saves. Jim Poelzer and Brian Celli combined to make 33 saves for Vancouver.

Shamrocks Jim Lynch, suffering from a painful heel injury, left the game after the first period. The injury is not believed serious enough to keep him out of the finals.

Also missing were Bill Marechek, sore shoulder, and Scott Browning, injured leg.

Salmonbellies got four goals from Eric Cowieson and two goals each from Brian Tasker, Ivan Tuura and Mark Tuura in the win before 1,175 fans.

Len Ciminelli, Bob Tasker, Ken Brown, Steve Manning, Ray Durante, Dave Durante and Cory Carlisle each scored once for the Salmonbellies.

Tim Kelly scored twice for the Adanacs, while Rico Bellusci, Dave Cochrane, Mario Govorchin, Ray Mattinson and Art Hazell each tallied once.

STICKING OUT HIS TONGUE, Sandy Mayer of the United States concentrates on his return as he upset fellow American Vitas Gerulaitis 7-6, 6-3 in Canadian tennis championships in Toronto, Thursday.

Who needs a curve ball? Yanks can't hit for smoke

By The Canadian Press

Steve Stone didn't have his curve ball Thursday night but New York Yankees had even less.

Stone, who leads the majors with 19 victories, checked the punchless Yankees on two hits as Baltimore Orioles roared to a 6-1 triumph in the opener of a five-game series and charged within 2½-games of the fading first-place New Yorkers in the American League East.

Stone said he used a lot of sliders in beating the Yankees 4-2 on a seven-hitter last Saturday. This time, he did it with smoke.

"When you face a team two times in six days, you've got to give them something different to look at," he said. "I showed them a lot of fastballs tonight."

Elsewhere, Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 4-2, Boston Red Sox downed Detroit Tigers 3-1, Cleveland Indians trimmed Texas Rangers 7-2, Oakland A's nipped Minnesota Twins 2-1 in 11 innings and California Angels edged Seattle Mariners 2-1.

In the National League, Nolan Ryan hasn't been the money pitcher Houston Astros expected.

But he looked like a million dollars Thursday.

The high-priced, but inconsistent, right-hander came through with one of his best efforts of the season, a three-hitter that led the Astros to a 2-1 victory over San Diego Padres.

"We've got to turn this around quick or we're not going to make it," said Ryan, whose Astros had lost six of seven games prior to the opener of a four-game series in San Diego.

The victory moved the Astros within a half-game of the front-running Cincinnati Reds in the NL West.

In other action, Philadelphia Phillies stopped New York Mets 8-1; San Francisco Giants defeated Atlanta Braves 5-1 and St. Louis Cardinals nipped Chicago Cubs 10-9 in 10 innings.

Stone, who is having his finest season, received home run support from Gary Roenicke, Rich Dauer and Ken Singleton. Roenicke hit a two-run shot off Tom Underwood in the sixth while Dauer and Singleton connected on consecutive pitches from Ron Davis in the seventh.

Dauer also doubled home a first-inning run and scored on a single by Benny Ayala. The Yankees scored on Reggie Jackson's 32nd home run in the second inning. Their other hit was Bucky Dent's single in the fifth.

Manager Dick Howser bemoaned his team's continuing hitting woes.

"We're just not swinging the bats and I don't know what to do about it."

Tony Perez slammed a three-run homer in the first inning and Steve Renko, Tom Burgmeier and Bob Stanley made it stand up with a combined five-hitter for the Red Sox. Rick Burleson drew a leadoff walk from Dan Schatzeder, Fred Lynn singled and Perez belted his 20th homer of the season. The blast gave him a league-leading 87 RBI.

Gary's grand slam had Eugene glaring

Baseball managers have been known to look every-which-way for any tell-tale sign that might help achieve success.

It is possible Eugene Emeralds' field boss missed the look of askance Thursday, and the looks that followed were the kind that could kill.

It didn't bother the Victoria Blues. They were out looking for their fifth straight Northwest Baseball League triumph, and achieved it at Royal Athletic Park because of a storybook finish.

First baseman Gary Humpston salvaged a dramatic, 8-7 victory for the Blues with a grand-slam home run that came with two out in the ninth inning.

Trailing 7-3, and with Emerald pitcher Curt Kepshire seemingly in control, Victoria started its last at-bat innocently enough. Shortstop Rod Murphy hit a fly ball that was caught easily for the first out.

Second baseman Richie Archie singled. Then Paul Stevens and Barry Moss coaxed successive walks to fill the bases.

The obviously-tiring Kepshire, however, reached back for a reserve supply of energy and struck out Paul Kirsch. Two out.

Kepshire then walked Joe Lorenz to force in one run, and the switch-hitting Humpston stepped up.

Kepshire, one out away from a route-going victory, was detected looking at his manager, then the bullpen. Even some of his worried teammates looked at the bullpen, a general indication of the feeling: "Hey, maybe we can use somebody else to get us out of this jam."

Humpston had gone hitless in his three previous official at-bats, and the Ems manager probably felt Kepshire, who had pitched hitless ball over the first four innings, could do the job.

He didn't because Humpston sent the first pitch rocketing over the right field fence.

The looks that followed, among the Ems, bordered extreme disgust.

The joy was on the Blues' side of the field as Victoria continued its torrid August challenge for the lead in the Northern Division. It was the Blues' 16th victory in 22 starts.

Seeds fall from tennis

Times News Services

Two big seeds fell by the wayside at the Player's International Canadian Open tennis championships in Toronto Thursday. One was blown away and the other felt so bad she couldn't continue.

Third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of New York City was upset 7-6, 6-3 by injury-prone Sandy Mayer of the United States while Martina Navratilova of the U.S., the top women's seed, retired in her match with Anne Smith because of back spasms.

Navratilova was the second big-name player to withdraw because of an injury. On Wednesday, second-seeded John McEnroe of the U.S., retired in his second-round match because of an ankle injury.

Top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden, meanwhile, had trouble advancing to the quarter-finals of the $325,000 Grand Prix tournament but prevailed 7-6, 4-6, 6-3 in his match with Peter Rennert of the U.S.

Borg, who has been having problems with his right knee and has said he will withdraw from the tournament at the slightest bit of further trouble, said his knee was OK following his match with Rennert, a 21-year-old Stanford University student who plans to return to school in the fall.

Mayer, who has been injured off and on for the last year and is just returning to top tournament form, had a relatively easy time beating Gerulaitis, who appeared at times to be lackadaisical during the second set after losing the first-set tiebreaker.

On the women's side, second-seeded Chris Evert-Lloyd, the favorite now that Navratilova is no longer in the tournament, beat Sharon Walsh of the U.S., 6-1, 6-1. In other women's play, Pam Shriver of the U.S., upset fourth-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia, 6-7, 6-3, 6-2, fifth-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia downed Stacey Margolin of the U.S., 6-2, 6-2 and eighth-seeded Andre Jaegar of the U.S., beat Jeanne Duvall of the U.S. 6-3, 6-2.

The Borg-Rennert match thrilled the capacity crowd at the National Tennis Centre at York University under sunny skies and gusty winds.

In the first-set tiebreaker, Borg went up 5-4 when Rennert double-faulted, then took a 6-4 lead with a service ace on the next point before taking the tiebreaker 7-4.

Rennert broke Borg's service in the seventh game of the second set to take a 4-3 lead, then watched in the 10th game when Borg fought off two set points before the American prevailed.

Rennert fought off three match points in the third set — two of them on his service — before losing the encounter.

Attendance Thursday at the nine-day tournament that ends Sunday was 7,807. Tournament organizers have sold 60,710 tickets to date, including sell-outs for today, Saturday and Sunday.

Standing-room tickets only are available for the final three days. The CTV network will carry live telecasts today from 4 to 6 p.m. EDT, Saturday from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. EDT and Sunday from 2 p.m. EDT to 4 p.m. EDT.

The women's singles final is set for 12 noon Sunday with the men's singles final set for 2 p.m. EDT.

Meanwhile, unseeded Shlomo Glickstein of Israel upset fourth-seeded Bill Scanlon 2-6, 6-1, 6-4 in the $75,000 Stowe Grand Prix tournament in Stowe, Vt. In other action, top-seeded Peter Fleming became the first casuality of the tournament, falling to the unseeded Ferdi Tagan 7-6, 5-7, 6-4.

Skalbania confirms purchase

CALGARY (CP) — Vancouver millionaire Nelson Skalbania confirmed Thursday that he has purchased the Memphis Rogues of the North American Soccer League and will be moving the team to Calgary.

Skalbania told a news conference all contracts have been honored and the team will begin its indoor season in November at the Corral, where the Calgary Flames of the National Hockey League also will be starting their season.

Skalbania purchased the Flames, formerly the Atlanta Flames of the NHL, five months ago.

He said he expects the soccer team name will not be changed.

The purchase still needs the approval of the league board of governors.

Skalbania has not announced the cost of the purchase but said he paid Memphis businessman Avron Fogelman, former owner of the Rogues, less than $2 million.

Callan one stroke off course record

LONDON, Ont. — Nancy Callan of Victoria had her golf game back in fine shape Thursday but she feared it came too late to give her a shot at the Canadian junior women's golf championship.

The 15-year-old Uplands member shot a two-over-par 74, tying France Dallaire of St. Georges-de-Beauce, Que., for the low-round of the day but because of her opening round 88 Wednesday she is tied for 12th at 162 in the field of 109 with only today's final round remaining in the 54-hole test.

The fine round by Dallaire, 17, pushed her into the lead with a 151 total, three strokes ahead of Audrey Bendick, 13, of Tecumseh, Ont., and four strokes ahead of Lynn Hurd of Parry Sound.

Callan's round was just one off the junior women's course record of 73.

"I hit the ball straight today. I knew what club to use and my shots were holding," explained Callan. It was a crummy day. It rained in the morning but turned out okay in he afternoon."

Callan just missed a hole-in-one on the 176-yard third hole when her four-wood drive rolled to within two inches of the cup.

She was even par after 15 holes but took a double-bogey on 16 when she needed two shots to get out of a bunker.

"I finished par, par though. I should have had a birdie on 18 but I was really nervous because I knew I had a good round."

Welts and Groth in seniors' finale

Tacoma's Keith Welts was hoping it will be second time lucky for him today.

Runner-up last year, Welts played par golf to reach the final of the Seniors' North West Golf Association championship for the second year in a row Thursday by defeating medallist Erv Parent of Seattle 7 and 5 at Victoria Golf Club.

Welts met Arnie Groth of Seattle in the all-American final today after Groth edged Ray Cranston of the host club 2 and 1 in Thursday's other semi-final.

Hudon finishes with a flourish

It was another night that the Joe Hudon players enjoyed at Sandown Raceway.

Leading driver at the meeting, which now has run 52 days and ends Sept. 6, Hudon closed with a flourish and had three winners and two seconds on the 10-race standardbred program. He was in the money in four of the last races.

Hudon was in the seat for the favored Cut The Deck ($4.30) in the fifth, Conestoga Tiger ($6.10) in the seventh and Silent Slade ($11.30) in the featured ninth.

He also contributed to the largest exactor of the evening ($195.50) with a second-place finish on Cedarwood Champ behind upset winner Tea N Crumpets ($29.70), driven by Carl Sibiga, in the third.

The triactor of B.C. Lionel, Winsomes Shadow and Active Pass returned $258.90 in the ninth.

Racing continues tonight at 5:30 p.m. and Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Ontario crew reaches final

HAZELWINKEL, Belgium (CP) — A Canadian women's rowing team qualified Thursday for the final at the junior and lightweight world rowing championships, setting the stage for a defence of its gold medal performance in the same event last year. In the junior eights-with-cox event, the Canadian team, made up of all Ontario rowers, finished third in the second elimination heat, 1.77 seconds behind Czechoslovakia, which won the six-team race.

Cox beats the flu and classic field

Times News Services

Bob Cox and his queasy stomach led a Canadian challenge Thursday to the favored status over more illustrous foreign competitors in the International Golf Classic for the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association championship at Edmonton.

Cox, a 40-year-old from Richmond who got his game back in shape this spring after a two-year break from the grind of touring golf, fired a sparkling, six-under-par 64 over Edmonton's Mayfair course.

The round, consisting of eight birdies and a couple of bogeys, was good for the first-round lead, one stroke ahead of Armando Saavedra of Argentina.

A dozen other Canadians followed Cox into the top 20 as Mayfair's deep fairways and tricky greens puzzled most of the 18 foreign golfers invited to compete against 114 CPGA members in the $100,000 tournament, which carries a top prize of $20,000.

A few CPGA participants are not totally happy with the changed format of the championship, which until 1978 was restricted to Canadian golfers.

Dave Barr of Kelowna was one player who questioned the fairness of a situation in which foreign players receive guarantees and expenses while Canadians have to pay their own way.

"I don't mind them inviting Palmer, Player, Charles and Aoki because they'll attract the crowds," Barr said, "but some of these guys I've never heard of. I'm not getting a penny for playing here and I'm missing a chance at $650,000 in purses."

Barr, who had a 66 Thursday, was referring to abandoned opportunities to qualify for this week's Westerchester Classic and next week's Buick Open in the United States.

Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, Bob Charles and Isao Aoki are among the foreign contingent competing.

Joining Barr at 66 Thursday were Serge Thivierge of Laval, Que., Gartenmeyer and John Morgan of Victoria.

Player, the South African rancher who has won 114 tournaments throughout the world, had a 67.

Victorians Jim Rutledge and Bob Beauchemin both managed one-over 71s.

Cox, recovering from a two-day bout of stomach flu after a seafood dinner, said he forgot about his stomach problems after making "a couple of dandy" birdies — one out of a bunker and a 45-footer from the fringe of the green.

Another apparent victim of bad food was Pat Braza of the Philippines, who was taken to hospital Thursday morning with severe pains in his side.

Meanwhile, in Harrison, N.Y., Tommy Valentine, a career non-winner, was looking for golf's Holy Grail.

And that is, simply, winning.

Valentine, 31, who once lost his playing rights for lack of performance and still is subject to the trauma of the Monday morning qualifying rounds to gain a place in PGA tournaments.

He showed improvement Thursday with a strong performance, including a birdie-birdie-finish for a 65 that gave him a share of the first-round lead with David Graham and George Burns in the $400,000 Westchester tournament.

Hockey benefit Sunday

Games for the people

KELOWNA (CP) — Alberta and British Columbia are united against Ottawa on a common energy plank, but differ when it comes to federal support for provincial sporting events.

"These kind of activities unite our country," Alberta Recreation Minister Peter Trynchy said Thursday during the opening of the annual B.C. Summer Games.

"It would be in their (Ottawa's) best interest if they showed some (financial) support," he said. "But my experience so far is that it isn't there. I expect we've got to go our own route."

When provincial recreation ministers meet at Ottawa this fall, "hopefully we can convince them to join us . . . if we unite our athletes, we unite our people, that makes for a better Canada."

But Premier Bill Bennett disagrees.

"We do it well and we don't require financial aid from everywhere," he said in an interview. "We don't have too many fingers in the pie."

"I'm not inviting them in because this is an area we're handling very well, both financially and physically. The organization we've done doesn't require it."

During the opening ceremonies under sunny skies, Bennett told about 5,000 people jamming stands and a grassy area around the track at the city's Apple Bowl that the games "are not for super athletes, they are for the people."

One couple, athletes in the Vancouver-Squamish zone, took the premier at his words, as the husband marched with a year-old baby in a backpack. The child seemed bemused at the cheering and clapping which greated contingents from each of the eight provincial zones.

During the march-past, a soccer player from the Kootenays threw a soccer ball to Bennett while he stood on the reviewing stand. Bennett caught it and threw it back.

Later, a Fraser Valley parachutist stopped at the stand and invited Bennett to take a prachute jump today. The premier declined.

And members of the black-powder shooting contingent from one of the zones fired their muzzle-loading rifles in a spontaneous salute to the games.

There were miscues. The Kelowna Barber-shoppers were supposed to lead the crowd in the national anthem, but without microphones, they could hardly be heard. Those on the reviewing stand — with microphones — tried to assist, but faltered part way through on unfamiliar new words and timing, before finishing strongly, albeit at a different time than the Barber Shoppers and their followers.

Then games organizer Ron Butlin had his speech cut short with the arrival of the two athletes carrying torches to light the Games' flame. And just as one of the runners reached the flame, her torch went out.

A pair of Voodoo jets from CFB Comox 409 squadron stunned the crowd with a sudden low-level pass. The jets were representing the site of the 1981 Summer Games.

More than 3,200 athletes begin three days of competition today, including about 40 wheelchair participants.

Bennett told the crowd that next summer, the Games will be dedicated to handicapped athletes, because the United Nations has declared 1981 the year of the handicapped.

DAN BROSSEUK
. . . a big catch

Brosseuk to join Vikings

The Canadian intercollegiate basketball champions, University of Victoria Vikings, will be strengthened this coming winter season with the addition of Dan Brosseuk, a six foot, seven-inch graduate of Penticton High School.

The 18-year-old Brosseuk has played on the B.C. team and recently was named to the all-Canadian high school team. He was selected to the all-star team in the provincial championships although his club only placed eighth.

Viking coach Ken Shields said Thursday he was delighted that Brosseuk was entering UVic. Describing him as a fine outside shooter with great range, Shields said:

"Dan is without question the top high school forward in the province."

Nott gets Rapp call

Times News Services

B.C. Lions head coach Vic Rapp and would-be professional quarterback Mike Nott appear to be in agreement that stiff-necked pride has no place in their relationship.

Rapp swallowed hard this week, then telephoned Nott — whom he'd cut in the Canadian Football League pre-season — to feel him out on a possible return to help the Lions out of their quarterbacking crisis.

"I was shocked," Nott said from his parents' home in Sebastopol, Calif.

"I hope it goes through," he added. "I don't want to get my hopes up and then get let down again.

Joe Paopao is out for two to three weeks with a shoulder separation suffered in Tuesday's loss to Calgary Stampeders.

Rookie Roy Dewalt, who beat out Nott for the back-up position, has yet to prove himself, though Dewalt will get his first chance to do so next Wednesday against the Roughriders in Regina.

Did Nott consider turning down Rapp's request that he consider a return to Vancouver to back up Dewalt?

"It crossed my mind for about one second," Nott said. "I figured if he can turn around and call me up after what happened, then I can say yes."

"We still haven't made any definite decisions," Rapp said.

"We've talked to some other people as well, but it would be a big advantage having Mike, because he knows our system."

In Ottawa, the Rough Riders traded second-stringer Charlie Weatherbie to Hamilton Tiger-Cats Thursday and will face Montreal Alouettes next week with two relatively untried quarterbacks.

Weatherbie, at 25 already a well-travelled veteran, is expected to replace Hamilton's Bruce Lemmerman, who aggravated a shoulder injury when the Ticats defeated Toronto Argonauts 18-16.

Sending Weatherbie to Hamilton in exchange for future considerations leaves Ottawa without a first-string quarterback since Condredge Holloway was hurt two weeks ago.

That leaves the Riders with Jordan Case, who played his first professional game Tuesday in leading the Riders to a 27-17 win over Montreal, and Ron Calcagni, here on a 14-day trial after being dropped by the Alouettes, as quarterbacks.

In Hamilton, it was revealed that Rufus Crawford, leading rushing for Hamilton Tiger Cats, will be lost to the club for three to six weeks with a separated shoulder.

Sox for sale?

CHICAGO (AP) — Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner and Smith Inc., one of the United States' largest investment brokerage firms, is considering trying to buy the American League baseball Chicago White Sox for a client, a spokesman has confirmed.

Dalhousie coach

HALIFAX (CP) — Peter Esdale, whose hockey coaching career includes three championship years with the University of Alberta Golden Bears, has been appointed head coach of the Dalhousie Tigers.

Laperriere named special Ruel aide

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Laperriere, who played 12 seasons as a defenceman with Montreal Canadiens, has been named director of special assignments with the National Hockey League club.

Laperriere, 39, will assist head coach Claude Ruel at team practices and also scout professional and junior hockey games.

Executive vice-president and managing director, Irving Grundman, said: "We are indeed pleased that Jacques Laperriere is returning to the organization where he played his entire professional career."

Laperriere's appointment ended speculation that he would be named Ruel's assistant coach for the upcoming season.

Laperriere had been involved in a $50,000 lawsuit against either the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co. of Chicago, the Canadiens or the NHL, depending on who accpeted responsibilty for an injury which ended his career during a practice session in 1974.

The lawsuit was settled out of court last June 26, and part of the agreement stipulated that terms of the settlement not be made public.

Grundman also announced that Steve Penny, a goaltender with Shawinigan Cataractes of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, had signed a contract with the team. Penny was drafted in the eighth round of June's NHL entry draft.

Karpuk fashions timely no-hitter

Winning pitcher Bev Karpuk hurled a no-hitter at Hyacinth Park Thursday night to give Strathcona Stingers a 6-0 victory over Victoria Athletics and the consolation title of the Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League.

The Stingers took the best-of-three final series in two straight games as Karpuk struck out one, walked one and two batters reached base on errors.

Donna Triplett hit a two-run triple and two singles in three trips to the plate while teammate Christy Smith went three for four.

In Thursday's other game at Hyacinth Park, Bemister's Welding took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three championship final by beating Butler Brothers 4-2.

Marilyn Bolton pitched a three-hitter for the win.

Meanwhile, in district men's playoffs, Tally Ho and Knowles Realty recorded wins.

With Wayne Forland driving in three runs, Tally Ho defeated Ingraham Rodeway Inn 6-3 in a senior "B" playoff game at Central Park and Knowles edged Labatts 1-0 in a senior "C" game at Heywood Park.

The win was the first for Tally Ho which is now 1-2 in the three-team round-robin competition. Ingraham is 2-1 and Tod Hackett Construction is 1-1. Tod Hackett plays Ingrahams as the playoffs continue tonight.

Knowles meets Royal Oak in the senior "C" final tonight at Heywood.

At Macdonald Park, Coast Projects clinched the Macdonald Men's League playoff title with a 4-0 win over Mayfair Insurance. A three-hitter thrown by Greg Harris helped Coast Projects take the best-of-five final series 3-1.

Capitals lay claim to crown

Capital Radiators won the Cosmopolitan Senior Amateur Baseball League playoff title for the first time with a 6-3 victory over Farmer Construction at Lambrick Park Thursday.

Starter Rob Ekstrom, with a little help in relief from Dale Aune, earned the pitching decision as the Radiators wrapped up the best-of-five final series 3-1.

The winners scored five of their runs in a fifth-inning spree.

Howe invited to rugby talks

Bruce Howe, Canada's national team the University of Victoria Vikings coach, has been invited to represent this country at the International Conference for Coaches and Referees, to be sponsored by the Welsh Rugby Union Sept. 11-21 in Cardiff.

Hotels file suit against NFL.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Century Management Inc., which operates four hotels in the New Orleans French Quarter, is suing the National Football League for $30 million, claiming defamation.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. federal court, claims the NFL's charges that three of hotels managed by the company reneged on room commitments for the Super Bowl football game next January were libelous, slanderous and false statements.

A challenge by Elks club

A Victoria soccer club is tired of sports bodies just taking money in all the time and feels they should start putting something back into the community.

The Royal Elks Soccer Club (formerly Cosmopolitan Royals) is donating $100 to the Canadian Cancer Society in recognition of Terry Fox's Run for Cancer and challenges all sports and recreation teams in Greater Victoria to do likewise.

"Terry Fox's 'Marathon of Hope' should serve as an example of dedication, perserverence and determination to us all," says the club in a press release.

"Over and over again in a wide variety of sports we have proven that Victoria is the sports capital of Canada — let's prove it again in another way!

"We have a perfect opportunity to show the larger communities that our athletes are not just concerned with their own little field but that we are concerned with the overall problems of society. What better opportunity to show concern than to join in the fight to defeat cancer?"

The Royal Elks Club urges other sports bodies to accept its challenge and to send a cheque or money order to the Canadian Cancer Society, Marathon of Hope, c/o 857 Caledonia Ave., Victoria. And the club suggests all cheques be marked 'Victoria Sports Challenge' so a list of those clubs which do accept the challenge can be made.

"Over the years we've gone to the community for handouts and this seems to be the way it always goes," says Russ Ball, a member of the soccer club for 10 years and one of its directors.

"Even before you get to the other sports, you're looking at 50 senior soccer clubs in Victoria and this is an ideal opportunity for them to put something back into the community. We as sports people should get behind a guy like Terry Fox and offer him support."

Ring safety being probed

HALIFAX (CP) — A nine-member study group on professional boxing is hopeful it can make safer a sport which has claimed 340 lives around the world since 1946.

Following two days of meetings by the group, chairman Dr. Clarence Gosse told a news conference Thursday the group will likely recommend computerizing boxers and standardizing rules.

"We believe that most Canadians want boxing to stay and we hope to bring in recommendations that will allow that to happen in a warm and humane way," Dr. Gosse said. "We are trying to streamline the (system) so we will have some semblance of unanimity across the country."

The study was ordered by federal Sports Minister Gerald Regan following the July 7 death of Montreal boxer Cleveland Denny, who died 19 days after a June 20 bout in Montreal against Canadian lightweight champion Gaetan Hart.

Cries for an investigation into the professional boxing in Canada were reinforced by an incident before the Denny fight in which Ralph Racine of Niagara Falls suffered head injuries in a bout with Hart. Racine is undergoing therapy in a Hamilton nursing home.

Boxer Clyde Gray, who will defend his Canadian welterweight title next Thursday in Halifax against Alan Clarke, said he hopes the study group will be able to stop injured boxers from fighting. But he admitted all the risks of boxing cannot be eliminated.

The study group will hold public hearings next month in Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver.

It will examine a number of areas of the sport in Canada, including organization, rules, medical examinations, refereeing and whether a medical doctor should be allowed to stop a fight.

Some members of the study group, which includes Gray, will travel to other countries to discuss control over foreign fighters who come to Canada to fight Canadian boxers.

Murray Sleep of Halifax, president of the Canadian Boxing Federation, said computerizing boxers will enable the federation to keep detailed records of all fighters, whether in the country or entering it.

The computer system is being used by the New York Boxing Commission and will keep detailed records of the fighter and his manager and the results of the boxer's last 30 fights.

House designated heritage despite protests of owner

A dilapidated mansion at 617 Battery Street in James Bay was designated heritage by city council Thurday night over the protests of the owner and two aldermen who said it would create hardship for the man.

Larry Lee, who has owned Pinehurst for about 25 years, said the city has already downzoned his property twice and tried once before to designate the 1880s' house built by lumber baron W.J. Macaulay.

He said it was odd the city was so interested in heritage designation of his home. When the city owned the house itself earlier this century, the worst damage took place as porches and balconies were demolished.

He can't afford to repair the building, which houses a dozen suites, Lee said. He had an estimate on replacing the "clamshell porch" in the front and that alone would be $40,000 to $50,000.

Under heritage designation, he is allowed three years' worth of tax rebates if he uses the money to fix up the exterior — about $7,500.

"To get it back in shape would be quite a bill," Lee said.

Aldermen Frank Carson and Ron McKenzie opposed designation and tried to get the matter deferred until the full council is back from vacation, but Ald. Gretchen Brewin, Bill McElroy and acting mayor Robin Blencoe carried the vote.

"The building is certainly not what it once was. It's had a lot of funny things done to it," said Carson.

McElroy said Lee's plans to stucco the exterior and replace the window would destroy any heritage quality. If Lee needs help, city staff would be willing to advise him on what needs to be done.

Brewin said neighbors in the area have taken a strong interest in preserving the house and would help in the restoration.

In a related matter, council ordered Morguard Properties Ltd. to repair another heritage house at 1121 Pandora.

Under Section 936 of the Municipal Act, council declared the building "so dilapidated and unclean as to be offensive to the community" and ordered that it be cleaned up, repaired and restored to its original condition within 30 days.

RING TOSS WAS POPULAR game during summer carnival staged in Beacon Hill Park Wednesday by the city of Victoria's recreation department. Youngsters enrolled in the playgrounds program helped man the booths.

Royal Olympic plans okayed

The Royal Olympic Hotel's $2 million expansion plans got the nod from city council Thursday night as concessions on parking, height limit and density were granted in return for the hotel agreeing to build in a period style matching its original building.

Aldermen voted 4-1 to rezone the corner of Broad and Johnson, site of the former west wing of the hotel which suffered a disastrous fire several years ago.

Architect David Hambleton said the plans call for the new 55-bed addition to match details and materials in every respect. Even the cornice will be duplicated, but in more durable fibreglass instead of glazed ceramic material.

"We feel we can make a very close match," said Hambleton.

The hotel asked for elimination of the usual parking requirements because many of its guests come in group tours by bus and there is also a civic parkade a block down Johnson for those who do drive their own cars.

The six-storey addition will again bring the Royal Olympic up to 100 rooms.

No one spoke against the proposal at the public hearing, but realtor Philip Holmes, part owner of 660 Johnson next door, wrote to council opposing the project because the lack of parking would create traffic congestion.

Ald. Robin Blencoe cast the only dissenting vote on the rezoning application. He said he wanted to wait until other aldermen were back to discuss the important precedent established for the Old Town area.

Landlords, activists argue downzoning

Landlords, developers and neighborhood activists all had their say Thursday night as city council listened to arguments about the downzoning of half a square block in James Bay.

The western part of the block bounded by Simcoe, Rendall, Oswego and St. James — next to McDonald Park and James Bay school — was downzoned to permit only duplexes and townhouses.

Residents started a petition drive to downzone from the existing R-3 apartment zoning after developers started making offers for property on the block earlier this year.

Landlord George Steele, who owns three houses in the area, opposed downzoning.

He admitted his houses are in poor condition but said the zoning doesn't make renovation desirable and launched into a general condemnation of deadbeat tenants who run down his houses and steal his appliances.

On the other side was a representative from Hall Clark Homes Ltd.

He said he is the "nasty developer" neighbors feared, but said he doesn't plan a highrise tower. He bought two lots at 317 Simcoe to build a tasteful five-unit townhouse project.

Instead, he spent three months designing the townhouse project to fit the small site and got caught a week away from applying for a building permit when the downzoning process started.

Council confirmed a concession granted by the city earlier this summer. In view of the good design and the company's willingness to take out a development permit giving the city control over aesthetic aspects, zoning on his parcel will be R-K townhouses. The rest of the half square block will be R-2 duplex.

Charles Ball of the James Bay Residents League didn't object to the duplex zoning — originally neighbors wanted single family zoning restored — but attacked Ald. Bill McElroy for the concession granted to Hall Clark without consulting the residents.

Council forces apartment repairs

The owner of a recently renovated fourplex at 714 Esquimalt Road faces court action by the city of Victoria to prevent the occupation of the building until it has been made safe.

City council voted Thursday night to apply for an injunction which would keep the converted house empty until owner Richard Richmond makes repairs.

Tenants had complained to the fire department about fuses blowing whenever appliances were plugged in and a blue flash when the washing machine starts up.

Ald. Ron McKenzie said he talked to Richmond this week and he is willing to do the work. Richmond recently bought the building and didn't know there had been uninspected electrical work done.

But Ald. Frank Carson pointed out that Richmond had ignored several letters from city hall since June about the matter.

"If we're going to have a building code we have to enforce it," he said.

Federal money employs youth

Students are staging plays, teaching youngsters to ride bicycles and working with the handicapped as part of the federal government's Summer Youth Employment Program.

Six summer projects involving 35 students received federal funds this year under the program.

The projects were sponsored by the Pacific Opera Association, Capital Region Safety Council, University of Victoria school of music, Victoria Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons, Victoria Environmental Centre and Swan Lake-Christmas Hill Nature Centre.

The opera association hired five performing arts students to help organize its next production, The Barber of Seville and they spent the summer in an old Esquimalt warehouse constructing sets and assisting with rehersals.

The regional district employed nine students as instructors to give children five-hour detailed training courses on bicycle safety.

Five concert musicians were paid to perform for people who can't get out to live concerts.

Chinese scientists here

Four Chinese scientists have come east to find out what the West is doing in marine ecology research.

A spokesman for the group said China is planning to place new emphasis on marine research programs.

Professor Li Guanguo, a marine biologist from Shandong College of Oceanography at Qingdao, said scientists are being sent to the West because the industrial nations of North America and Europe are the most advanced.

The scientists are attending an international symposium on enclosed marine ecosystems at the Pat Bay Institute of Ocean Sciences.

More than 30 institutions from nine nations are represented by more than 100 delegates.

Li said his country has a strong foundation in aquaculture, having assigned a high priority to the production of food.

Some acquaculture systems are used in raising marine food plants, fish, crustaceans and shellfish.

Li, who translates his name into John K. Lee, is no stranger to North American research.

Thirty years ago he did post-graduate studies at Texas Christian University and went on to work at the Texas A & M research foudation and Virginia Fisheries Laboratory before the Communist revolution in China.

His colleagues at the conference are Li Yongqi, of the Shandong College radioecology lab, associate professor Li Shao-jing, vice-director of the marine biology division of Xiamen University's oceanography department at Fujian and associate professor Wu Yuduan, vice-director of marine chemistry at Fujian.

Information unit for IOS

A new division of oceanographic information has been set up as part of an administrative reorganization of the Institute of Ocean Sciences effective this month.

Former staff officer Dr. Alan Cornford is chief of the new division, established to meet local, regional and other needs in assembling and disseminating oceanographic data, information and advice to government and industry.

Cornford said work of the division will be co-ordinated with the institute's library. With a small staff it will be able to carry out some studies, such as environmental impact, through its environmental services section under Brian Smiley and Dick Herlinveaux.

Cornford is also responsible for public information; remains in a program planning, analysis and advisory role for the director-general, Dr. Cecil Mann, and is regional representative on the Pacific Coast ocean dumping advisory committe.

The new organization provides for six other divisions of responsibility which are basically unchanged except to recognize Dr. John Garrett as acting chief of ocean physics and to place the head of ships section under director of hydrography Mike Bolton.

Before the judge

A 20-year-old Colwood man who celebrated his birthday May 16 by stealing a car in Victoria and smashing it at Nanoose Bay north of Nanaimo was jailed for nine months by Judge Blake Allen in provincial court on Thursday.

Donald Patrick Jackson, 2988 Leigh, also was placed on 12 months probation.

Jackson, who pleaded guilty, took a car belonging to Carol Arlene Ardin and hit a bridge causing $2,000 damage.

He had previous convictions, the most recent in February for possession of stolen property.

Judge Harold Alder ordered a presentence report on a 17-year-old who pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft at a Florence Lake Road home.

Randhir Samra, 2849 Lakehurst, was remanded until Sept. 12.

Another 17-year-old was told by Alder it might be a good idea to make him use a spoon to replace the dirt in six planters he overturned with a juvenile companion in a downtown shopping arcade.

But Kirk Nugent, 205 Wilson, received a suspended sentence after pleading guilty to wilful damage. He was placed on six months probation to include 75 hours of community service work. He must pay $100 for the damage.

Nugent also was fined $50 each on two possession of liquor charges.

Judge William Ostler ruled that a 61-year-old man had been properly notified of the Crown's intention to seek a jail term when he was charged with impaired driving last December.

William Koculyn, 595 Gorge Road East, had been found guilty after an Aug. 5 trial which he missed because of illness.

The Crown sought a jail term because Koculyn had a drinking-driving conviction in April, 1979.

Ostler sentenced him to 20 days on the latest conviction but allowed Koculyn a work release so he can keep his job.

Frank Symes, 24, of 997 Wilmer, was sentenced to 30 days in jail on a drinking-driving charge.

Fined on similar charges were: Helen Reid, 40, of 4307 Torquay, $400; James Butler, 46, of 1186 Kangaroo, $400.

Region wants more punch in dog war

The Capital Regional Board has asked the provincial government to restore the district's authority to deal with dogs that harass livestock.

Directors also decided there will be no compensation for loss of sheep when the animals are not regularly under surveillance.

The CRD wants the government to give it authority to make Bill Leach, regional animal control officer, a peace officer with the authority to deal with owners of dogs that harass and kill livestock.

They also want legislation allowing destruction of dogs that kill livestock.

Spring Island sheep farmers say they are more concerned with protection of their animals than compensation for losses.

In other business, Jim Campbell, Al Beasley and Howard Drummond were named to the voters' list court of revision which will sit in the board room at 524 Yates on Oct. 1.

Executive director Dennis Young was appointed returning officer for Islands Trust elections.

In other regional business, Ramond Vowles, Dennis Smith and Mrs. Mickey Gregor have been appointed to the Sooke Economic Development Commission for two-year terms.

And Constance Armour, 682 Granderson, has been named to the Juan de Fuca Parks and Recreation Commission. She will serve the rest of the term of A.E. LeQuesne who recently resigned.

J.P. Herbert, 7832 West Coast Road, was appointed to the Otter Point Fire Protection Committee to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Clifford Beange.

The CRD approved recommendations of the Juan de Fuca recreation commission for construction of a lacrosse box and tennis courts.

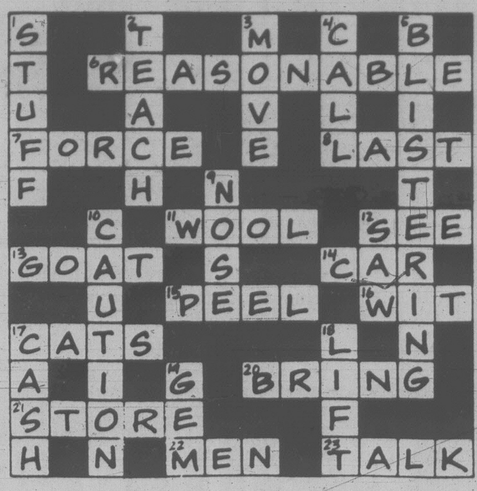
Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES ACROSS:

6. REASONABLE not seasonable. The clue should require "seasonal" rather than "seasonable." In any event, it's a question of a demand REASONABLE to expect.
8. LAST not lass. Thoughts of marriage will surely include wondering if the mariage will LAST. "Lass" is too whimsical.
11. WOOL not wood. The clue tends to presuppose some degree of softness, favoring WOOL. Not all wood is soft wood in the first place, much less "equally" soft.
12. SEE not set. Being a cynic is a matter of outlook or philosophy, rather than of what one actually does.
13. GOAT not boat or coat. Being organic, a GOAT will inevitably decline with age; but a boat may be able to remain in good condition indefinitely if well looked after. Similarly, it isn't age that wears out a coat.
14. CAR not war. "A good excuse" — a mere pretext — seems too trivial in the case of war. Also, one may well relate victory celebrations to the fact of the war being over, rather than of having won.
15. PEEL not feel. Anything that is "smooth to the touch" must be something you can touch.
16. WIT not win. As the clue suggests, there is an air of ease about brilliant WIT. The best and most brilliant win (victory) is very often achieved against rough opposition with evident effort.
17. CATS not cuts. Cuts are painful rather than "hurtful" (i.e., wounding to the feelings as CATS — spiteful persons — can be).
20. BRING not wring. It's always his job to BRING out the truth, even though it may not necessitate the toughness implied by "wring."
21. STORE not stove. The clue better suits the sort of fire that can be viewed as a public spectacle.
23. TALK not task. It is a TALK rather than a task, necessarily, that has as its function to stimulate the brain.

CLUES DOWN:

1. STUFF not staff. Since major burns to the staff can be tragic injuries, the clue's casual phrasing ("it's a pity") suits STUFF better.
3. MOVE not rove. The clue's words: "about restlessly" (superfluous for rove) seem to be meant for MOVE.
4. CALL not ball. It is obedient response to a CALL, rather than natural reaction to a ball, that comes within the sphere of what the master "expects," and is "confident" of getting.
5. BLISTERING not blustering. Since the clue reflects admiration of this speech ("unfortunately" marred by inexactitudes), BLISTERING is more apt.
9. NOSE not pose. Since the uncomfortable pose is evidently the choice of the artist or photographer employing her, it is arguably not "her" pose so much as simply the pose. Also, since it is not up to her to complain about the pose, the clue's inference that she is at liberty to do so (but "may say nothing") favors NOSE.

Davis unleashes sharp attack on judges' 'tight little fraternity'

A judicial system that sees judges tried by judges has to be changed, Social Credit MLA Jack Davis said Thursday.

Davis, a former Socred cabinet minister relegated to the backbenches after his 1978 conviction for defrauding the provincial government of $1,000, unleashed a strong attack on the province's judicial system during debate on the attorney-general ministry's estimates.

"Who should pass judgment on judges when judges themselves have a vested interest in protecting the good name of the august profession in which they have chosen to serve," the North Vancouver-Seymour member said.

Davis, who referred to the judiciary as a "tight little fraternity" said: "Lawyers who let judges off with little more than a tap on the wrist are undermining our legal system more than they are helping it."

Judges should be tried by a jury of lay persons when they get into trouble, he said, adding they can't be left in a rarified atmosphere to protest and pontificate among themselves.

Davis made indirect references to well-known cases involving provincial court Judge Erik Bendrodt and B.C. Supreme Court Justice E. Davie Fulton.

Bendrodt left the bench for a short time, with pay, to deal with a drinking problem after he was seen picking up a prostitute on a Vancouver street in October, 1978.

Fulton, a former federal justice minister and provincial Conservative party leader, was fined $500 and had his driver's licence suspended for three months as a result of an impaired driving charge in 1979.

"How can you explain to the average layman why the in-group in the legal profession rarely ever suspends a judge — a mild admonition of course," he said. "But then, if they have a drinking problem or a credibility problem, they get six months leave of absence with full pay.

"They get a paid holiday — enough time away from the bench for them to get over the shock of having been in trouble with the law and, hopefully, long enough for the public to forget what they did in the first place."

Davis — whose quiet voice failed to hide the bitterness about the way his own case was handled — said the judge made a big point of the fact he was a politician and saying he could not be dealt with as an ordinary citizen.

Davis was convicted in county court of converting eight first-class airline tickets paid for by the province into economy fares and pocketing the difference. He was fined $1,000 and placed on probation for two months.

"Having been a politician, I received an extraordinary sentence," Davis said. "That is not equality before the law and to make my point, it's not the kind of treatment that a judge would get at the hands of other judges."

. . . who tries judges?

Review of rates urged

An independent review committee should be established to help settle the dispute between the Insurance Corp. of B.C. and body shop owners over labor charges, says Peter Hyndman (SC — Vancouver South).

Hyndman, in a letter to Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, the minister responsible for ICBC, said he is concerned that the rate has fallen behind that in other provinces and the corporation refused to accept arbitration on the rate it set without consulting the shops.

The hourly rate was increased $2 an hour on April 1 to $25.60 but the Automobile Retailers Association said this is not sufficient in view of a new union agreement with mechanics providing for wage increases of up to 17 per cent.

Many body shop owners now have implemented a surcharge of $4 an hour or more which must be paid by the car owners.

Hyndman said he is disturbed that ICBC unilaterally set the rate with no consultation, and in advance of the union settlement.

He suggested the next body shop rate year — normally set for a 12-month period beginning April 1 — be set for the 18-month period Oct. 1, 1980 to April 1, 1982 when the union settlement expires.

ICBC management and the body shops should prepare rate proposals for that period, he said, and after they are submitted to the review committee for a report, ICBC could set a fair rate.

Stores not ready for metric

OTTAWA (CP) — Metric conversion in supermarkets and food stores will have to be delayed at least another year because of the federal government's indecision, the president of the Retail Council of Canada said today.

Alasdair McKichan said in an interview from Toronto the earliest that supermarkets can start the two-year conversion process is January, 1982, a year later than the latest deadline set by the former Progressive Conservative government.

The conversion had been scheduled for 1980 but was delayed by the Conservatives while the change to metric was reviewed.

"For a year we've been in a state of high uncertainty," said McKichan. "The longer we wait the more difficult it will be."

McKichan said the council will tell a meeting of the metric commission's committee on conversion in food later this month that the industry cannot be ready for 1981 because it will not have sufficient time to train staff and buy new equipment.

McKichan said the industry has wasted thousands of dollars training staff for the conversion, only to watch the deadlines slip by.

Nick Sabino of King City, Ont. leaps through air, roller skiing the summer slopes

Now, ski in summer's heat

WINNIPEG (CP) — Anyone who can walk can roller-ski, says Tom Vokey, a Winnipeg skiing enthusiast who is out to prove it.

Vokey, owner of the Nordic Ski School, is promoting what he considers the newest summer sport.

Roller-skiing works on the same principle as snow skiing, only it's easier, Vokey said.

"It's very basic. If you can walk, you can roller-ski. In fact, it's easier to stand on a pair of roller skis than it is to stand on roller skates."

The five-wheel metal skis were first developed in Scandinavia as off-season training equipment for competitive cross-country skiers. They are designed to simulate the action of cross-country skis on snow.

In Sweden and Norway, the popularity of cross-country skiing has helped make roller-skiing a well-established summer sport.

Norm Neil, who teaches the sport in Winnipeg, says it is a great form of exercise and an alternative to running.

"Running is a great way to stay in shape, but it doesn't really give the upper body a workout," he said. "Roller-skiing eliminates that problem because the pole action exercises the upper body muscles."

Vokey predicts that many runners will also see roller-skiing as a safer alternative.

"Anyone who is seriously into running encounters the constant threat of injury to joints and bones," he said. "But with roller-skiing, the strain is so minimal that competitive marathon runners accept it as a form of muscle therapy."

Vokey said roller-skis work best on asphalt or smooth concrete, but there is an all-terrain model with inflatable pneumatic tires for grass or gravel.

While many city parks provide adequate roller-skiing surfaces, Vokey recommends the more open spaces of provincial parks. He hopes to have ski trails paved for this purpose.

"It only takes a couple of hours to develop a smooth, consistent rhythm," he said. "Then the skier can easily roll along at 15 kilometres an hour or more, depending on individual stamina."

Bad spills are rare in roller-skiing, but, there are the "hotdogs", who try for their thrills on the hills.

"I wouldn't advise it," Vokey said, unless you have a certified instructor at your side or an ambulance waiting for you at the bottom."

Jack Sassville, who coaches local and national cross-country skiing, said roller-skiing is a superb all-round conditioning sport for any athlete. He also sees it as a great form of recreation and frequently knocks off more than 20 kilometres a day on roller-skis, just "for the fun of it."

Man swims Korean Strait

TOKYO (AP) — A South Korean swimmer battled strong tidal currents in a shark-proof cage Monday to become the first person to swim the 50-kilometre-wide Korean Strait between Japan's Tsushima Island and South Korea, officials said.

Cho Oh-ryon, a 30-year-old bachelor and gold medalist in the 1970 and 1974 Asian Games, was reported in good condition after the 13-hour, 10-minute swim.

City hall gets last laugh

OTTAWA (CP) — Board of control got a rare chance for revenge on one of its journalistic critics Thursday, poking fun at The Citizen for its blundering foray into the world of home renovation.

In a tongue-in-cheek motion passed with only one vote against, controllers jabbed at the newspaper for spending $80,000 more than planned on widely-publicized renovations of its Idea Home, a dilapidated, 89-year-old house near the downtown core.

"Whereas The Citizen editorial staff has regularly been critical of all who go over budget or otherwise demonstrate imperfections . . . at least some senior staff at The Citizen demonstrated inadequate planning, failure to seek legal advice, failure to internally communicate and absence of financial control," the motion read.

The newspaper bought the house in the spring of 1979, with plans to write regular articles on its renovation to help readers who might have similar plans in mind.

But by the time the project was complete, almost a year late, renovation costs had soared to $252,000 and furnishing costs added another $30,000. In the meantime, both the original contractor and the architect were taken off the job.

One city councillor described the unsuccessful project as "a real comedy of primitive errors."

"They tried to do good things but proved in a glaring way that they can match any foul-up city hall can make."

The house, which features a solarium and a small roof deck, was open to the public for about a month but now is on the market for $198,000.

Canadian takeover thwarted by Hunts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Texas billionaire Hunt brothers say they were asked to invest in a major New York brokerage house by the company's management to thwart a takeover bid by a Canadian group The Sun says is the Belzberg family of Vancouver.

Nelson Bunker Hunt says he and his brother William accumulated stock in the Bache Group, following the request of its management.

"Management stated that its suggestion and request were related to the concern over the taking of a position by a Canadian group," Hunt said in a statement filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

He did not name the group.

Samuel Belzberg and his brothers, through their companies, are the largest single shareholder of Bache, one of the biggest and most prestigious brokerage houses in the U.S., with 10.3 per cent of the outstanding common stock.

The Hunt brothers, who lost millions in silver speculation when the bottom fell out of that market in March, are second with a 6.6-per-cent holding.

Delayne Gold, Bache's first vice-president in charge of corporate affairs, said in an interview with the evening newspaper that "we have not seen the SEC filing per se, but there is nothing in the accounts we have read that seemed incorrect."

Hunt, who acquired the joint holding with his brother in Bache as far back as January, did not file a report with the SEC until Monday. U.S. federal securities law requires holders of more than five per cent in a company to report within 10 days.

Since April, the SEC has been investigating the Hunts' link with Bache, which had loaned the brothers millions of dollars on margin for silver speculation. When the price of silver collapsed, the brokerage house had to scramble to avert huge losses while the SEC temporarily halted trading of its stock.

Belzberg has refused to comment on The Sun's report.

His family took a 5.1-per-cent initial stake in Bache in the spring of 1979 and increased the holding to 7.8 per cent that summer. Bache's directors and officers hold 8.3 per cent of the stock.

Gold said that last fall shareholders passed an amendment to its certification of incorporation, which was specifically "designed to thwart a takeover of the company."

The amendment requires any party seeking to take control to acquire or receive support of 75 per cent of common stock. And directors can only be removed in the event of an affirmation vote by 75 per cent of the outstanding shares, making it difficult for Belzberg or a Belzberg representative to sit on the board.

"I suppose management (Bache) views a Belzberg takeover as meaning a complete change in management," said Frank Cusato, Value Line investment analyst in New York.

Union membership up

OTTAWA (CP) — Union membership has increased in the past two years but the percentage of the work force that belongs to unions dropped, Labor Canada said Wednesday.

The new figures said union membership increased by 3.6 per cent to 3,396,721 from 3,277,968 from the beginning of 1978 to the end of 1979.

During the same period, the percentage of the work force belonging to unions dropped to 30.5 per cent from 31.3 per cent.

Comparable figures for workers in the non-agricultural paid work force dropped to 37.6 per ent from 39 per cent.

Labor Canada said in a statement more than 2.3 million workers are in unions affiliated to or chartered by the Canadian Labor Congress, the country's largest labor organization. That's 68.5 per cent of total union membership.

The Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions has 187,186 members in affiliated federations, representing 5.5 per cent of total union membership.

Unions with headquarters in the U.S. account for 46.3 per cent of total membership, compared with 47.4 per cent in 1978 and 49 per cent in 1977.

Sixteen unions have 50,000 or more members. The largest are the Canadian Union of Public Employees with 257,180 members, the United Steelworkers of America with 203,000 members and he National Union of Provincial Government Employees with 195,754 members.

SMOKING.
WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

If you've given up smoking more times than you'd like to remember, the chances are you enjoy it so much you don't want to give it up at all.

The question is, what are you going to do about it?

You've probably tried cigarettes that promised extra mildness and found yourself checking every once in a while to see if they were still lit. Which brought you right back to your regular brand.

Don't stop there.
Think Vantage.

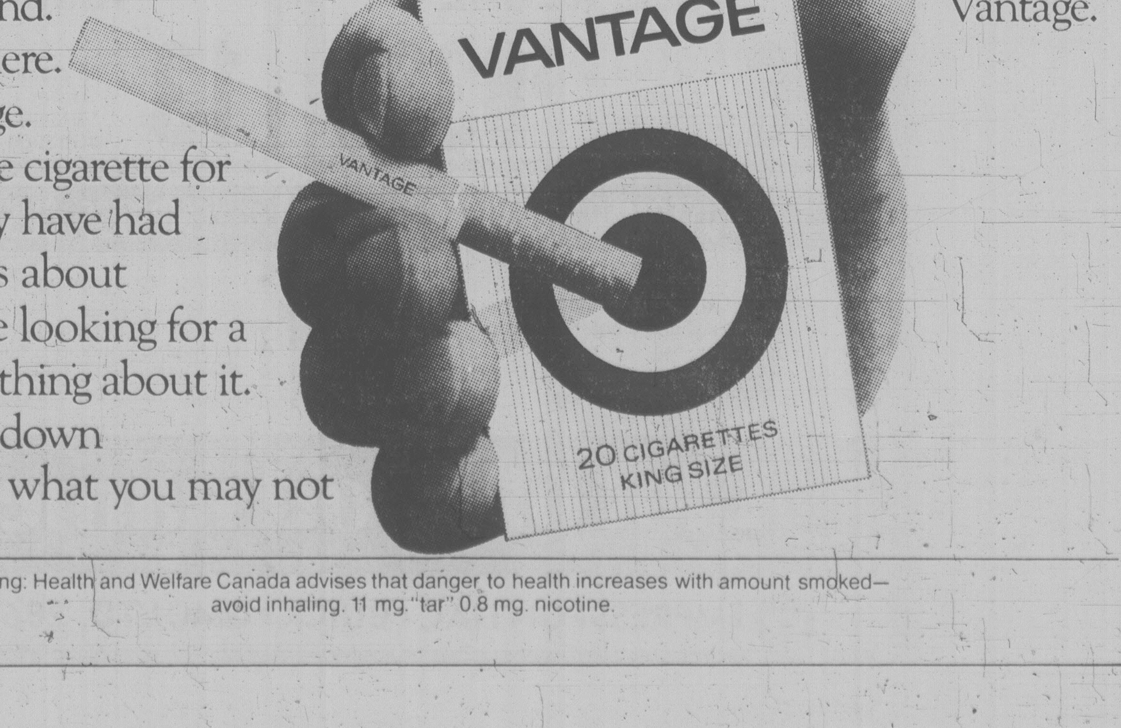
Vantage is the cigarette for people who may have had second thoughts about smoking and are looking for a way to do something about it.

Vantage cuts down substantially on what you may not want, without cutting out that satisfying tobacco flavour you've come to appreciate.

Now Vantage isn't the only cigarette of its kind you can smoke, but it may well be the only one you'll enjoy.

To put it simply, Vantage still tastes like a cigarette.

All things considered.
Think Vantage.



Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked—avoid inhaling. 11 mg. "tar" 0.8 mg. nicotine.

Firemen survey London shopping mall demolished as tornado touched down

Mini-twister causes havoc in surprise London strike

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A small tornado touched down in the southern part of the city Thursday night, tearing roofs from several apartments and businesses, uprooting trees and tossing hydro wires into the streets.

No injuries were reported in the storm that developed abruptly out of a regular thunderstorm which had moved across Lake Huron earlier in the afternoon.

The roof of a three-storey apartment building was swept into the back yard and several walls were blown in.

Many of the 100 distraught tenants milling around the grounds of the building said they had found temporary accommodation for the night.

Building superintendent Marlene Seifert said she was "still shaking" half an hour after the storm hit. She said she and building owner Ted DeBoer ran through the halls alerting tenants and whisking children to safety as the winds hit.

Frank Lochner of the London weather office said the storm, which lasted from about 7 p.m. EDT to about 7.30 p.m., was following a normal pattern until it reached London. By the time a weather warning was issued it was all over.

A variety store, a real estate office and a pharmacy at the Glen Cairn Plaza had large sections of their roofs blown off.

Moon Kang was serving customers at the variety store when the twister hit. She said everyone ran to the back of the store where they huddled together until a customer led them to safety outside.

Part of the roof of another apartment building was ripped off and was dangling over the parking lot seven floors below.

High winds also caused one tree to crash onto the roof of a home and three trees fell on a parked car.

Hydro wires were down in many streets and some were tangled in fallen trees.

Floods developed on many streets with cars pushing through water up to their headlights.

London City Police Insp. George Brunton said it was a miracle that no one in the apartments or the damaged plaza was seriously injured.

Police searched all affected buildings after the tornado to make sure no tenants remained. Later today, Brunton said, work will get under way on assessing damage and clearing up the debris. In the first hours after the storm, he said, "no one would even give a wild guess" what the cost of the damage was.

The storm cut off electricity to about 4,000 homes on the city's south side, officials said. Work crews restored power to most of the areas but those homes closest to the storm's centre were not expected to have their power back until later today.

Ma Bell a name dropper?

HAMILTON (CP) — Rudolf van-Oldenbarneveld-Genaamd-Tulingh of Hamilton is used to people shortening his name.

But when Bell Canada did it arbitrarily in the latest telephone directory, Rudolf, who says he descends from Dutch aristocracy, complained.

First Bell told him 32 letters was too many for a Bell subscriber to have in a name and it would cost extra to print the full name.

But now the phone company has relented and will print his name in full in the next directory edition.

"Mr. van-Oldenbarneveld-Genaamd-Tullingh has been sent a letter of apology," said Bell's Hamilton district manager.

"Subscribers are entitled to have their correct names listed even if they do run into two lines of type."

Gray plans to keep multinationals in line

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA — Industry Minister Herb Gray has come up with an intriguing scheme to embarrass Canada's foreign multinationals into being good corporate citizens.

Although it is still before cabinet, Gray took the usual step of giving Canadians a sneak preview of his plan this week in an interview with FP News Service.

The minister, just back from a nine-day trade mission to Japan, said he felt it was necessary to disclose parts of his yet-to-be-approved program because Canadians appear to be developing false and needless fears about the government's plans to beef up its control over foreign companies.

Gray's scheme would work like this:

Each year the government would select a few influential foreign-owned companies and require them to fill out a detailed questionnaire describing their corporate behavior. He and his officials would then use this information to rate the company's contribution to Canada, highlighting areas in which its performance was not up to scratch.

The company's "report card" would be released to the press and public, exposing the firm's shortcomings.

"We don't contemplate making our performance standards mandatory," Gray said. "But it is likely that most firms would respond to public opinion."

Multinationals that can demonstrate they've been good corporate citizens have nothing to fear, he says.

But he conceded that big business is nervous about the prospect of submitting to intensified government scrutiny. And he realizes the powerful multinationals will hardly be overjoyed at the thought of having their 'sins' splashed across the front pages.

"I'm not suggesting people aren't uneasy. But I do think those firms which boast about being good corporate citizens should welcome the chance to demonstrate that they really are."

In spite of corporate apprehensiveness, the 49-year-old Windsor lawyer intends to forge ahead boldly.

One reason. He says he is confident the public is firmly behind him in his crusade to increase Canadian participation in the economy. In fact, Gray believes that Prime Minister Trudeau's election promise last February to be tougher on foreign multinationals was largely responsible for the Liberals' decisive victory at the polls.

He feels he owes it to Canadians to fulfill Trudeau's pledge. A major part of his mandate as industry minister is to give the country an opportunity to start buying back its U.S.-dominated economy, Gray says.

Drapeau's sidestep bylaw

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau's executive council, never known for being eager to answer potentially-embarassing questions, is preparing a new bylaw to give it the power to ignore citizens' queries at city council meetings.

The proposed bylaw, which comes in the wake of a new Quebec law requiring a public question period at council meetings, says the chairman of the council's executive committee "can always refuse to reply to a question without giving a reason. And his refusal cannot be discussed in any way."

The executive committee is the council's central policy-making body.

Questions will have to be submitted in written form 10 days in advance, must not exceed 250 words and must be free of opinions, hypotheses, allusions or questioning of motives.

Nick Auf der Maur, one of two opposition councillors on the 54-member council, said in a telephone interview Thursday that he isn't surprised by the proposed bylaw, which comes up for approval this Monday.

"That's the way it works already," he said. "They don't have to reply to councillors' questions. They use this all the time."

He added that the only reason Montreal has a council "is that the law says we have to have one. It really exists only to ratify decisions of the executive committee."

Auf der Maur was also critical of council's plans to vote itself hefty salary increases, including a $19,000 annual pay boost for Drapeau.

He said the increase is "scandalous" because the council, controlled by Drapeau, has no real power and exists only to ratify decisions of the executive committee.

PM, ministers meet in Alta.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and about 10 of his key ministers will meet Sept. 2-3 in the Alberta mountain resort of Lake Louise "to plan government priorities for the future."

Trudeau will be meeting with what is called the priorities and planning committee of cabinet.

Canadians are savers

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians fortified their image as savers rather than spenders in the 1970s by saving at twice the rate of the previous decade.

Personal savings, as a share of personal disposable income, rose to a peak of 10.9 per cent in 1975 from 5.3 per cent in 1970, says a finance department study of the savings behaviour of Canadians.

Uncertainty about inflation and unemployment caused consumers to switch out of traditional investments such as stocks and long-term bonds into short-term bank and other deposits in an attempt to earn more than the current rate of inflation.

But sometimes the strategy didn't work. The study shows that between 1975 and 1978, people investing in bank deposits did not make a real return because inflation was higher than interest paid.

Provincial divorce laws can't include 'Renos'

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal constitutional proposals on family law could make divorce easier to obtain in one province than another but there would be no quickie Reno-styled separations, federal officials say.

A province could soften the grounds for granting a divorce — enact a no-fault divorce law for example — and thus make it easier for a couple to end their marriage than it would be in another province which remains under the Federal Divorce Act.

However, a uniform residency requirement would be applied in every province equally to prevent the quickie separations like those allowed in Reno, Nev., a gambling town where Americans can literally drive in and secure a divorce on the spot.

The residency rule would require anyone applying for a divorce to have lived in the province where they seek it for at least the previous one year. So no one could drive across the border to a province with a looser divorce law to end their marriage in a day.

Justice department officials appointed to handle the family law issue in the current federal-provincial negotiations over constitutional change explained details of the proposal in interviews as controversy over the issue mounts and a conference on the subject is being prepared by women's rights leaders for next month.

Under the current power structure, the federal government has full jurisdiction over divorce. In the constitutional negotiations, the federal government is offering to grant parallel jurisdiction to any province that wants it.

In practical terms that means any province can write a separate divorce law and have it enacted by the provincial legislature. As a result of the parallel jurisdiction, the divorce would be recognized as valid across the country.

It means, however, there could have 10 different sets of grounds on which a divorce can be obtained.

The Federal Divorce Act requires a three-year separation or proof that one spouse has abandoned the other for at least five years, has been adulterous or cruel, is an alcoholic, drug addict or homosexual, among other grounds showing one party is at fault.

For years the Liberal government has promised a no-fault federal divorce law. Nothing has come of it and federal officials say such reform is an issue separate from the constitutional negotiations.

They justify the transfer by saying some provinces want to enact their own law and that local community standards should govern the grounds on which divorce is granted by the courts. Theoretically, divorce laws across the country could end up being identical.

The federal government is also offering to write into the constitution authority for the provinces to establish family law courts that could cover all aspects of marital collapse.

Under the existing system, provincial courts handle separations and the child custody and maintenance orders that result from them. Federal courts handle divorces and the child custody and alimony orders that result from them, sometimes changing the orders covering the people the provincial courts handle.

Enforcement of the child custody and maintenance orders already is difficult for authorities, and concern that it would become even more difficult has prompted the federal government to back off a February, 1979, proposal to put it entirely in the hands of the provinces.

Narcs stung in payoff

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Two RCMP officers trying to buy four pounds of marijuana were robbed of $2,200 by their intended prey Thursday and forced to drop a several-months-old undercover investigation in this city.

They did, however, arrest four suspects.

The officers, who were not identified, began the deal about midnight in a secluded part of this city on the St. Lawrence River near the Ontario-Quebec border.

"Our men handed over the money for the drugs, which were supposed to be in the trunk of the (suspects') car," an RCMP spokesman said later.

"But instead of the drugs, a shotgun was pulled from the trunk and our guys were ordered to 'Hit the grass.'

"It was a classical drug ripoff — something that doesn't happen to us very often but is a frequent occurrence in the bona fide drug world."

The men escaped but as the officers were driving back to their office, they spotted a car which resembled the suspect vehicle and followed it to a city apartment where four men were arrested and $2,200 and a sawed-off shotgun confiscated.

Radio, TV ads net $879M

OTTAWA (CP) — Radio and television advertising revenue increased 17.6 per cent last year over 1978 to $879 million, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Radio advertising last year was worth $352 million — up 15.2 per cent — while television advertising rose 19.2 per cent to $526.8 million.

The figures also show industry operating expenses increased 15.3 per cent last year to $1.2 billion.

The next after-tax profit for private broadcasters was up 18.2 per cent at $74.8 million while the operating costs of the CBC — financed from parliamentary grants — rose 11.9 per cent to almost $540 million.

Lyon recovering

WINNIPEG (CP) — Premier Sterling Lyon remained in hospital today recovering from two fractured ribs he suffered in an accident at his cottage.

The accident happened about 10 days ago when Lyon tripped over a lumber pile outside his cottage.

Michael Bunton, 13, of Mississauga, had no trouble becoming the first visitor to the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto on Wednesday. He just walked in through the unguarded Princes' Gates. Bunton arrived at about 6:45 a.m. EDT and walked in more than an hour before the annual fair's scheduled opening. "It was a whammy," said Howard Tate, the exhibition's assistant general manager. "The gatekeepers weren't on duty yet and he just walked right in. "It's the first day and we're bound to have the usual snafus."

Prince Charles

Opera-lover Prince Charles has donated his 176-year-old cello to the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, to raise money for an extension, it was announced today. The cello, originally presented to King George IV and handed down to Charles, has been sold for £15,000 ($41,250) to a charitable trust and will be lent to the opera house for use by a talented young musician. A Buckingham Palace spokesman said the prince played the cello at school but didn't have "much time" to practise these days.

GWG Ltd., the Edmonton-based manufacturer of jeans, says hockey star Wayne Gretzky is too modest. Gretzky, a centre with the Edmonton Oilers and the National Hockey League's most valuable player last season, rates his derriere a modest five on a scale of one to 10. But GWG thinks enough of Gretzky's background to sign the 19-year-old to a two-year contract posing for the company's "bum-bum" television commercials.

Myron Scott gave the U.S. Internal Revenue Service the shirt off his back — and tax collectors cashed it. The 39-year-old registered nurse, an activist in the tax cut movement, wrote the IRS a check on the back of a blue denim work shirt for $292, the final installment on the $1,100 he owed in income taxes. The garment came back, like any other check, with stamps from the Federal Reserve and a local bank. He said he got the idea for the stunt from a newspaper article. "I felt the same way that guy did, that I was paying taxes through the nose. "I feel like I'd like to have a little more control, that right now I'm insignificant." An assistant vice president at Scott's bank said that although the shirt is legal tender, he would prefer customers sticking to more traditional forms of exchange.

Dear Abby:

I bought a car from my brother-in-law for $400. I gave him $250 down, then 30 days later the brakes went out and I had to lay out $350 to get them fixed.

I think in view of the fact that the repairs were so major, he should write off the $150 I owe him. We're all family, and he's a nice guy, so don't you think he should let me off the hook for the balance?

Car Trouble

Dear Trouble:

A deal is a deal. If he's a "nice guy," don't spoil a friendly family relationship by expecting more of a relative than you would from a stranger.

Dear Abby:

I am an adult woman with a family of my own. My problem is my mother. Last year Dad died. He and Mother were very close. Mother, being an intelligent woman, adjusted to her loss very well, but her adjustment has taken an abnormal turn.

Soon after Dad's death, Mother developed a very close friendship with a woman I'll call "Mary." Mary is uneducated, comes from a much lower socio-economic group and has a very little in common with Mother. Nevertheless they have become inseparable, eating together, sleeping together and spending every minute together when Mary is not working.

I think Mother has transferred the feelings she had for Father to Mary. I want Mother to be happy, but I think her relationship with Mary is abnormal, and I don't want my mother to become a lesbian.

This is something I can't discuss with Mother, but I think she needs help. How can I help her?

Concerned Daughter

Dear Daughter:

If you really want your mother to be happy, don't sit in judgment of her friend or the relationship between them. Your mother has the right to spend her time with whomever she chooses. And by the way, lesbians are born, not made.

Dear Abby:

My husband has always been turned off by fat women, so I have kept myself fairly slender and attractive for him. However, he has not returned the favor. Over the last three years he has become grossly overweight. He looks terrible in his clothes, and worse in nothing!

I love him very much and hate to see what he's doing to himself. He eats constantly — like a pig! He has also lost all his desire for sex, which is just as well, as I'm not exactly yearning for a 250-pound lover.

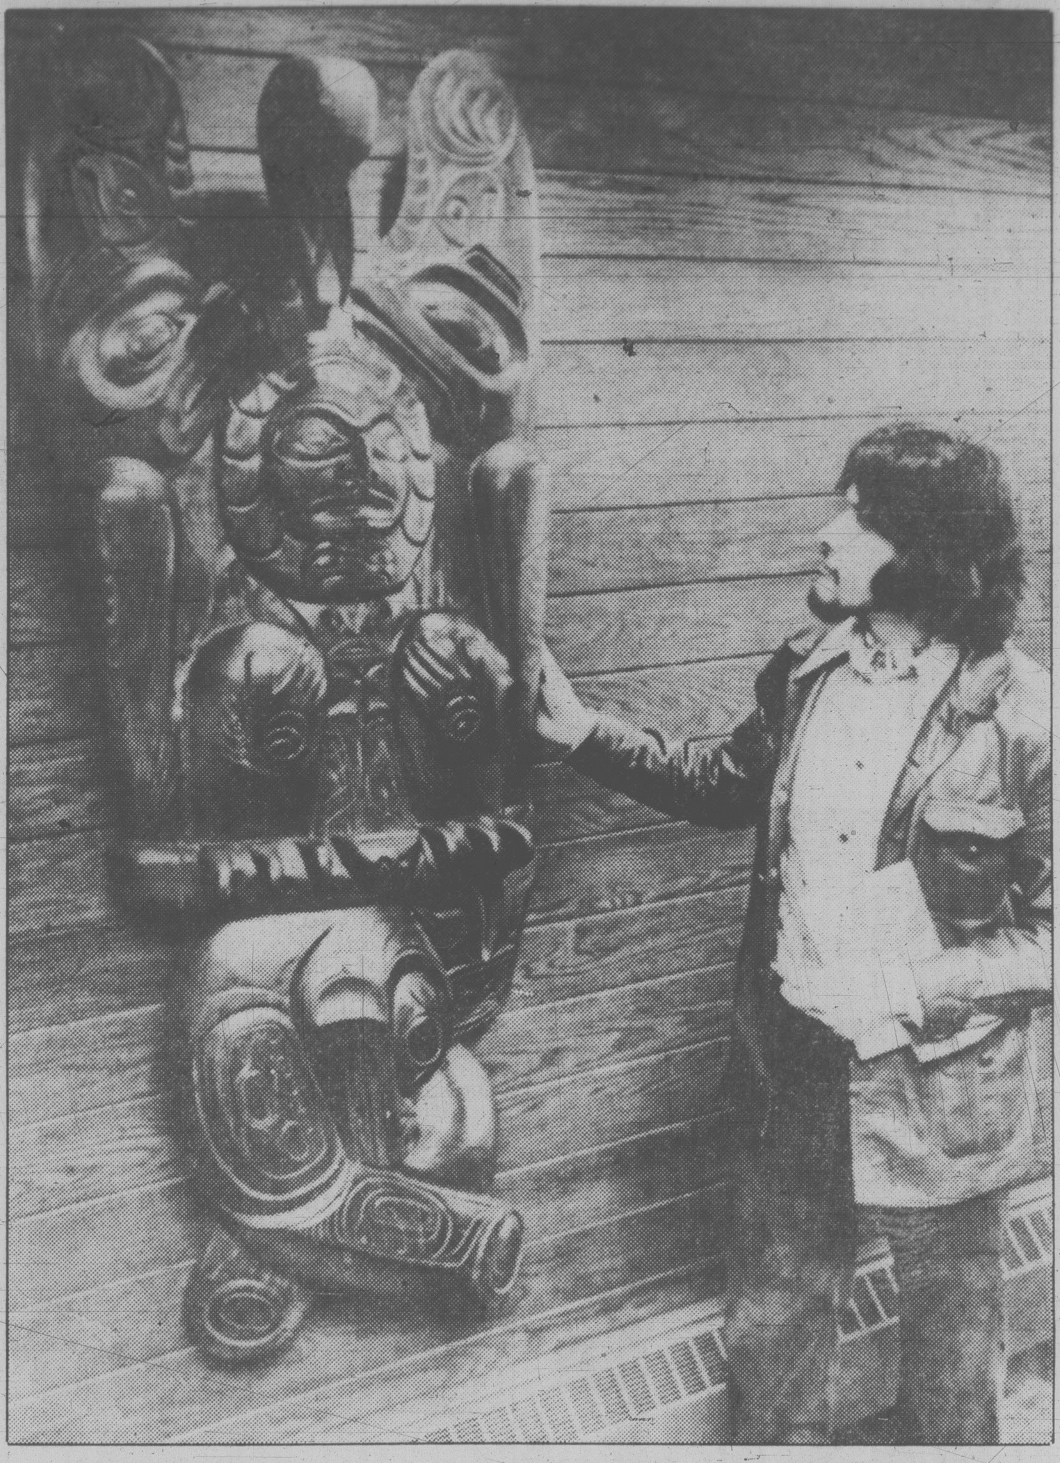
How do I let this otherwise wonderful man know how I feel without being a nag or hurting our marriage?

Wife of Flubber

Dear Wife:

It appears that your husband has already hurt your marriage by neglecting his appearance and losing all desire for sex. You can help by urging him to get professional help. He needs to find out what's eating him before he can stop eating like a pig.

Making legends come alive



Artist Floyd Joseph with the sculpture he created for North Vancouver city hall.

When the arts of the Northwest Coast Indians are referred to, it is the matchless work of the northern tribes of coastal B.C. and Alaska that comes so readily to mind — the Tlingit, Haida, Tsimshian, Kwakiutl and Bella Coola.

But while the artistic achievements of these tribes are well-known, little has been documented on the arts of the Coast Salish people who inhabited the coast of the mainland from Bute Inlet to the Columbia River and those areas of Vancouver Island not occupied by the Kwakiutl and the Nootka from Johnstone Strait to Port San Juan.

The Coast Salish did not historically carve totem poles, although carved "welcoming figures," houseposts and mortuary figures were noted by early traders.

These welcoming figures, standing 10 to 20 feet in height, were an awesome sight and caused much comment among travellers seeing them for the first time. Some excellent examples of these and other Coast Salish carvings can be seen here at the Provincial Museum.

It is now the young Indians of all tribes who are reviving and contemporizing the art and values which all but disappeared in the last 100 years. One such person is Floyd Joseph, a Coast Salish artist and carver who is representative of native aspirations.

Floyd was born on the Capilano Reserve in North Vancouver in 1953 and was raised in harsh times and circumstances. But from early childhood he demonstrated a remarkable ability to draw and paint.

While attending grades ll and 12 at Carson Graham school in North Vancouver, Floyd became inspired by the work of his art teacher Frank Perry — European-trained and a friend of noted Haida artist and silversmith Bill Reid.

"He (Perry) had a very profound influence over me," recalls Floyd. "He not only inspired me to greater heights as an artist, but he taught me to be self-confident and self-reliant and made me realize the importance of personal independence."

After graduating in art at Carson Graham, Floyd attended Capilano College for a year — taking art, sculpture, pottery, drawing and design, and while he was not yet out of his teens, his carved and painted masks, bowls, plaques and poles were eagerly sought by art lovers.

Modern day Coast Salish art is changing and has moved closer to the stylized designs of the north. Floyd and his contemporaries are frequently plagued with the dilemma of deciding whether or not to emulate the great northern classicists.

Says Floyd: "For my own knowledge I'm studying northern designs, but what I really wish is to develop my art as an individual, interpreting our people's legends in my own style."

Floyd's greatest challenge was a commission he received to carve a large work for the North Vancouver city hall.

Standing over six feet in height and carved from a single block of red cedar, the completed work is a powerful interpretation of the Coast Salish legend of the Creation of the Elements, the Unity of All the Elements, the low period during the "ridicule" of native culture, and finally the eventual rebirth of the art.

"At the top stands the Eagle — he is the guardian spirit," says Floyd. "In each of his outstretched wings are the profiles of a bear and a fish. The bear signifies strength and the fish, prosperity. On the breast of the eagle we see the Sun Mask or the Sun Man, which we relate to our own origins."

An exhibition of Floyd Joseph's works will take place in Victoria starting Friday, Aug. 22 and running to Sept. 6 at the Art Mosaic gallery in Harbor Square on Government Street.

Wanted: 143,997 sex-free hermits

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Los Angeles Times

APPLEGATE, Calif. — Fred Peterson, 48, president and one of three remaining members of the 93-year-old Esoteric Fraternity, is discouraged.

He has not been able to find new members willing to become hermits and swear to lifetime abstinence from sexual activity.

Founded in 1887 by a bearded mystic named Hiram Erastus Butler, the fraternity's membership at the turn of the century numbered 40 single men and women. It has been going downhill ever since.

Butler's basic message was: "When man gives up the sex act the kingdom of God will be established on earth." He called on all men to "never again cast your seed forth as do other animals."

He and his small band of followers migrated to the West Coast in 1887 where they homesteaded 320 acres on a mountaintop near Applegate, a Sierra Nevada hamlet 80 kilometres northeast of Sacramento.

"Members of the fraternity believed then and still believe they are to become the order of Melchisedek as prophesied in the Revelations of the Bible," says Peterson the cult's fifth president.

Undaunted by the fact they have only three members, Peterson says, "We believe when we achieve 144,000 followers, the order of Melchisedek and the kingdom of God will be established on earth."

"It gets pretty disheartening," says Peterson, who admits he may have some trouble rounding up another 143,997 followers.

Today Peterson, Willy Single, 79, and Georgia Mintz, 65, are still living behind the locked gate in the old yellow square brick and frame structure built by the group's founding members.

"The only thing that sustains the three of us is faith," Peterson says. "We have about 600 people on our mailing list all over the United States and in several foreign countries. At one time or another they have sent in for our literature. But none of them is willing at this time to give his or her all."

Their all includes a vow of celebacy and their worldly possessions.

Peterson grew up as a Mormon. He served in the Army in Korea and became a printer after the war.

"An old lady I knew in Salt Lake City gave me one of Butler's books in 1953. I had always wanted to become a hermit. Butler's book published in 1893 set well with me," Peterson recalls.

"In)956 I visited the Esoteric Fraternity headquarters for the first time. I really took to the philosophy and way of life here. Lena Crow, the only woman ever to head the group, was president then. She died in 1960."

William Corecco, who succeeded Crow, chose Peterson to be his successor in 1971 even though the younger man did not become a member of the group until after Corecco's death in 1972 at the age of 90.

"I have been stuck here ever since Corecco died. I cannot leave. I cannot contravene cosmic will," Peterson explains.

He and his two companions spend hours each day in meditation.

They also mail out on request copies of the defunct Esoteric Magazine, which was published from 1887 to 1943, and original books published as early as the 1890s.

"We have stacks of old publications printed during the past 90 years gathering dust on our shelves," Peterson says.

The headquarters is still furnished as it was when the group first moved in 93 years ago complete with pot belly stoves for heating, a woodburning oven for cooking. There is no telephone.

The three members live like hermits seldom leaving the premises. The locked gate is opened once a week when one of the group goes for supplies and mail.

Asked if lifting the celibacy vow might not serve to bring in new followers, Peterson replied.

"All our doctrine is based on life totally without sex. That is what we are all about. To remove that would mean the end of our purpose on earth.

"God so decreed that man should not spend his existence in endlessly reproducing his kind. Heaven on earth will never be achieved until people everywhere quit having sex," he added.

Surgery always has an element of risk

By DR. L. L. COLEMAN

Before my mother was operated on for a growth in her stomach the doctor said she was "a good surgical risk." Despite this encouragement, she developed every kind of complication and is still in the hospital, after two months time. Would you say that she should have been called a "good surgical risk"?

Mr. H.T.E.

Dear Mr. E.:

Your question is a fascinating one. it encompasses many of the elements in the equation of the doctor-patient relationship. Let us examine the initial statement that your mother was "a good surgical risk."

Every operation entails some detail of risk. Every general anesthesia carries with it an element or risk. The combination of the two, especially in a middle-aged person, makes physicians and surgeons utilize all the information they can gather in determining how well a patient is likely to fare, during and after surgery.

The general condition of the patient, the age, the condition of the heart, the lungs, the blood pressure, the blood circulation, the blood chemistry and the past medical history are taken into consideration in the evaluation of "risk."

Obviously, an older person with chronic heart or lung disease — or even moderately advanced arteriosclerosis — would be considerd a greater risk than a young athlete in the full bloom of life.

When a surgeon says that a patient is a "good surgical risk" he cannot, in any conceivable way, anticipate the unexpected complications that sometimes do occur. When such emergencies arise, doctors meet the problems head on and devote themselves to those complications.

Apparently, that is what happened in your mother's case. She was, according to all standards, a good surgical risk and did, indeed, survive the operation and the anesthesia. I am certain that her doctor did not give you a blueprint of exactly what he would find during the operation. This aspect of surgery is not included in the phrase, "good surgical risk."

The slow recovery and long convalescence in no way reflects on the initial judgment of her doctor.

Even when young people in excellent general health require surgery, there is no guarantee that complications will not arise. In that sense, every operation is a calculated risk.

The advent of the antibiotics, newer and safer anesthetics, excellent pre-operative preparation (physical and emotional) and highly refined operative techniques have markedly reduced the dangers implicit in an operative procedure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This can be a power-play. Know it, be confident, bring ambitions and aspirations into focus. Promote product — and yourself. Career advance indicated. One who "pulls strings" is willing to give you a "boost."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis on communication, travel, long-range project. Aries, Libra and another Pisces figure prominently. You gain insight into other cultures, languages. What appears a casual contact could become a "significant" relationship.

IF AUGUST 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a combination of introspection — and showmanship. Very few persons get deep enough below surface to really know you. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You are perceptive, prescient and have tendency to brood and be your own most severe critic. During this year — and especially next month, September — you make major domestic adjustments and there could be a change of residence. Lifestyle undergoes transformation. If single, marriage is indicated. If married, there could be addition to family. Married or single, there will be reunions; you get together with loved one who had been estranged.

Much too pretty to be killed

soap opera scene

Only on the Days of Our Lives scene a few months, Leslie James was knocked cold in the machine shop of Anderson Manufacturing.

But Dianne Harper, who plays Leslie, is much too pretty to be written out of the soap at this juncture. She's too important a cog in the show plotting. Miss Harper can give a cog a good name.

For Leslie, in no time at all, has plant boss Chris emotionally involved and jealous because she has a yen for the womanizing Alex Marshall, the big businessman who will double-cross his own mother if necessary.

Hero Chris needs Leslie in his corner for both business and pleasure. Leslie, however, can't be a push-over in either direction if she's going to build up a following. A lady is entitled to have different yearnings, one for the conniver and one for the boss. If she can get away with both, fans will applaud.

Though the role of Leslie James is a plum, part of Nina Laemmle's scheme to attract a younger audience for NBC's tired Days of Our Lives, no one has thrown rotten fruit. Dianne, Tulsa, Oklahoma's 5-foot-6-inch, 120-pound actress, is too nice for that. With brown hair, green eyes, she is a looker with a touch of wholesomeness thrown in, lacking only in family oil wells.

Dianne has been around tinsel town for a while as one of those Universal Studio contract girls signed right out of New York's American Academy of Dramatic Arts. She made the Universal rounds, from The Rockford Files to Emergency, then cut loose the umbilical cord to free lance in guest spots from Happy Days to Serpico.

Those nighttime guest shots are dandy if you get to meet the right people, but Miss Harper has yet to knock one for a loop. Maybe that's a matter of luck or perhaps her celestial signs aren't in sync. Working in "Days" may turn the tide. If only Leslie can out-wit the Jarvis goons skulking about, and stay out of machine shops in the middle of the night. Either that or change swamis down at the temple.

HARPER

CHANNEL CHATTER: NBC celebrated the premiere of its new soap Texas recently with quite a bash in the Promenade Cafe at New York's Rockefeller Center. The entire cast was in attendance as well as New York's Mayor Ed Koch and Lt. Gov. William Hobby of Texas. NBC's famed chief, Fred Silverman, also joined in the festivities which included a "down home" western bar-b-q and a country band...

Edge of Night's foreboding mobstress Frankie is played to the hilt by Shirley Stoler. Viewers may recognize Ms. Stoler from her leading role as the female Kommandant in Lina Wertmuller's highly acclaimed film, Seven Beauties...

Eileen Fulton has returned to her role as Lisa Colman on As the World Turns, after a six-week bout with infectious hepatitis. Apparently, the hospital switchboard and mailroom were overwhelmed during her stay. According to Miss Fulton: "Hospital personnel couldn't have been nicer about all the commotion. I'm sure they were happy when I felt well enough to leave the hospital, but they were also glad to have things settle down a bit"...

PLOT PORTENTS: Don is working against friends on Days of Our Lives; Jessica becomes Tod's tutor and that burns Joshua. Meanwhile, Neil is offered money to stay away from Liz and Julie remains in critical condition.

Cult leader Sumiko has sex with followers on The Young and the Restless, considering it a spiritual way of draining impurities. Greg is still alive, to his surprise, so wily Rose tries again to net the lawyer.

Delia senses danger for a member of the Ryan clan on Ryan's Hope, and Jack's decision about Amy may have come too late. Also, Kim asks Michael for advice.

Benny asks Phoebe for help on All My Children; Donna looks to Palmer as a friend. Meanwhile, Sean finds a surprising new interest.

Tina faces a dilemma on One Life to Live, and a photograph leaves Asa shaken. Dorian angers Clint while Jenny makes yet another self-discovery.

Raven tells her mother that she plans to marry Derek on Edge of Night. Draper and Emily are pursued in a wild chase on a rollercoaster and April finally meets Emily's "husband."

The demand for males is heavy volunteering

Readers may be surprised to learn that almost half of Canada's volunteers are men. Traditionally, men have volunteered their time, energy and expertise in such areas as coaching little league teams, leading and assisting with scouting programs, serving on boards of non-profit organizations and perhaps helping an elderly neighbor with some home repairs. But men today are engaged in a wide range of volunteer activities.

Retired men become involved in volunteer activity to maintan their connection with the community, to share their skills or learn new ones, and to actively fill their leisure time. For those who have retired from other areas, volunteer work can help to ease the transition of moving to a new community and developing a new network of friends and acquaintances.

Many Victoria organizations are looking for men to help with their programs. Men can choose volunteer positions which suit the amount of time they wish to give and which will not interfere with their other commitments. They can choose assignments which best suit their abilities and their interests. A wide variety of positions are available with organizations in the fields of recreation, health, mental health, social service, education, corrections, culture and the environment. The Victoria Volunteer Bureau receives requests for volunteers from over 130 Victoria organizations. Today's column features a sampling of requests which may be of interest to men who want to share some of their time and energy with the community.

A community-based organization working in the area of criminal justice needs volunteers to join their Wednesday evening program at William head penitentiary. The program involves a range of activities such as films, guest speakers and group discussions, games nights, and sports. A car pool is available and volunteers could choose to participate once a week or every second week.

A soccer team needs a manager to put up nets, run lines and help with other activities for their Sunday afternoon games. Previous knowledge of soccer would be helpful, but interest in learning about the game is most important. The season will start in September and continue until April.

An opera society would like to hear from volunteers who would be interested in helping with general carpentry for their sets and back-stage work. Bus fare and coffee will be provided and the hours will be arranged with the volunteer.

An activity centre for senior citizens needs strong persons to move chairs and tables and to set up or dismantle facilities between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. Monday to Friday. Actual hours would be arranged with the volunteer.

Neighborhood volunteer services need volunteers to assist the elderly and handicapped to remain in their homes by helping with chores around the house. Volunteers with an interest in gardening might help by pruning, weeding, cutting lawns and doing other gardening chores. Minor household and small appliance repairs are also major needs among the elderly. The time involved in these volunteer jobs is very flexible and can usually be arranged for daytime, evening or weekend.

A workshop for the mentally handicapped would welcome retired men with skills in carpentry, cabinet-making, woodworking and similar interests to work with handicapped young people, 16 to 26 years of age, to produce a wide variety of wooden products. Time would be arranged with the volunteer, involving at least one-half day per week.

A wheelchair sports group needs sports-oriented volunteers to teach and coach various sports, such as swimming, at various recreation centres. These programs usually take place on weekday evenings from 7 to 9.

Water in tire isn't unusual wheels

By MIKE LAMM

Dear Mike:

I was pumping up the tires on my 1978 Cougar yesterday. I overfilled one of them and, when I pushed in the valve core to let air out, water squirted out instead. There must have been half a cup inside the tire. How did the water get in there, and will water affect tire balance?

Wet Under The Tread

Dear Wet:

Tires are often mounted with a soap-and-water lubricant. Or unmounted tires that have stood in the rain get water in them. Water normally doesn't affect balance because it sheets inside the spinning tire. Nor will water harm the tire carcass. It can, however, lead to rust on the inner surface of the wheel.

Dear Mike:

I own a 1979 Corvette L-48 which is still under warranty. My problem is that when I drive for an hour or so, the ventilator fan begins to blow warm air. This becomes nearly unbearable in afternoon traffic. Is this normal for Vettes?

Sizzling

Dear Sizz:

Not normal at all. Sounds like your heater isn't shutting off completely.

Dear Mike:

I've heard about experiments with V-8 engines, in which four cylinders are shut down so the car cruises on the other four at highway speeds. When power is needed, all eight cylinders operate in the normal fashion. What's the feasibility of converting my Wagoneer 401 V-8 to such a system? Where can I get more information?

Half Gassed

Dear Half:

Experiments are continuing in that direction. I'm told that Cadillac will soon introduce such a system — perhaps even for 1981. And Ford tried it with a 6-cylinder engine a couple of years ago but abandoned the idea when results fell short.

Dear Mike:

When I drive my 1980 Thunderbird any distance and then turn off the engine, I hear a noise down by the heater that sounds like eggs frying. The dealer checked and found a deformed heater hose, which he changed, but the sound of frying eggs is still coming through loud and clear. What's your diagnosis?

Crackling Cackle

Dear Crack:

Frying eggs sound like frying grease. I wonder whether your noise is coming from the engine compartment and whether it might be oil or grease leaking onto an exhaust manifold.

Dear Dr. Levine:

I'm a 16-year-old girl who has a problem with my parents. Especially my father. We were never close, but now I find myself not even wanting to talk to or see him. Now it seems, every time I do talk to him everything is in the negative form. When I go out with guys I practically have to beg him to let me go out. My mother and I are close but whatever my father says, she obeys and doesn't argue. He also says things to me which I'm assured he doesn't mean, but I'm beginning to doubt that. I cry myself to sleep quite often over this and have been thought of running away.

Can you please advise me? I'm very unhappy.

Answer: I wish I had more information to go on.

Sometimes fathers become more protective of their daughters as they get older, to shield them from sexually aggressive guys. Their daughters' growing up also raises issues in some fathers of their own aging, diminishing attractiveness, and confusion about sexual behavior and feelings. This might account for some altercations, or restrictions on your freedom.

But what you are describing sounds more serious. You are miserable, and it sounds like your relationship with your father has few redeeming features to it right now.

What are you doing to correct the situation, or what role do you play in causing some of the friction between you? You were never close, and the existing tension only aggravates that emotional distance.

Rather than running away, which will cause more problems than it solves, how about facing the problem head on. Speak to your mother and father about how unhappy you are. Keep an open mind. Listen to their grievances and concerns. If matters can't be worked out yourselves, suggest to both of them that a family counselor at the Family Service Agency (for example) might be able to help you.

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I am a 16-year-old male with a problem that's confusing me so much. I just don't know what to do any more.

A while back, I met the "girl of my dreams." Out of all the girls I went out with, she was the only one that I can really be myself with, and who I can really talk to. Then it eventually ended. About a month after we broke up, we've just become 'Hi and By' friends. Now six months later, I'm still all hung up on her.

I've tried to talk to my friends about it, but all they can say is forget about her and find a new girl (which I've tried). When I tell them that I can't, they say that I'm a stupid fool . . . Am I really a stupid fool? Will it be wrong for me to still be hung up on her?

Answer: I don't think that you are a "stupid fool." You have had an important relationship that has had a lot of meaning for you. Also she had the ability to help you be yourself. It was an important relationship and, of course, you should not have forgotten about it. Six months may be a relatively short time for you to stop missing that relationship and I would imagine that at this time you are not yet ready to begin to form a new relationship.

It takes time to accept the ending of something important, to begin to realize that someone else can have meaning to you in a different way, but as importantly. You may have strong feelings for her for a long time, and even many years from now her name will probably still have a special meaning. Your friends are right in a sense to say "forget her" but it may be too soon. You will know when you are ready to let someone else begin to become important to you.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am a 15-year-old girl and a Roman Catholic. I have always gotten along well with my parents but we are not too close. I have never had sexual intercourse or ever been in a situation where I might want to or could have it. I think that can wait. I have never masturbated. I have only necked with a boy twice and not heavily.

My problem is that I have dreams that are really weird.

In my dreams I make love to men much older than me and sometimes see women's faces too.

I know it sounds stupid or evil, but it happens all the time and it's been going on for four months. I wake up gasping and I feel so guilty afterwards.

I can't tell my parents, and I even feel uncomfortable telling the priest, so I don't. But I think I have a problem that is maybe serious or it might go away. I'm really afraid.

Answer: What is happening to you can be quite readily understood both from a psychological and spiritual point of view, and by understanding why it is happening you may be able to make it less important and help it to go away.

You are an adolescent and have reached puberty. This is the time when your physiological responses of a sexual nature are ready to be roused. Your temperament and training are such that you have not experimented sexually and do not consciously wish to do so.

But, besides your own natural but unexpressed desires, you live in a society which exalts sex, in which you probably hear your friends talking explicitly about it, and perhaps sexual fulfilment, in your dreams, stands for your wish to be more mature and fulfilled as a person.

The fact that the sexual partners of your dreams are older men is probably an indication that sex stands for your becoming grown up; older women watching may represent what you want to be, that is, a grown woman. In your dreams, sex is the mechanism of becoming adult.

If you think this interpretation is true, then you should be able to bring your fears up into the light of reason, and the fear and anxiety attaching to your dreams should be lessened.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria V8W 2N4. Readers wishing to talk with someone about their problems can call NEED at 386-6323.

Experts challenge sex therapy claims

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have found it impossible to duplicate findings by sex therapists William Masters and Virginia Johnson because their work is "flawed by methodological errors and slipshod reporting," two California psychologists say.

Writing in the August issue of Psychology Today, Bernie Zilbergeld and Michael Evans said Masters and Johnson "have gone far beyond the allowable limits of nonperfection."

They said Evans tried to duplicate a study conducted by Masters and Johnson in St. Louis, Mo., using a college population, but was unsuccessful. Other researchers had similar experiences, they said.

Chris Simpkins, a spokesman for Masters and Johnson, said they have a general policy of not responding to criticism.

Evans and Zilbergeld criticized two works by Masters and Johnson, Human Sexual Inadequacy and Homosexuality in Perspective. In their critique, Evans and Zilbergeld say Masters and Johnson:

— Do not adequately describe their criteria for success or failure when they claim a 20-per-cent failure rate for their sex therapy treatment.

— Do not explain exactly on what basis they rejected patients, or who made the decision to reject them, thus making comparison with other studies difficult.

— Do not give enough details about their follow-up studies, making it impossible to compare the seven-per-cent relapse rate of Masters's and Johnson's patients with that of other researchers.

— Do not correctly distinguish men who are heterosexual from men who are homosexual, allowing Masters and Johnson to say they have helped homosexuals become heterosexuals when they are actually only helping men who are primarily heterosexual.

Evans and Zilbergeld said they do not blame Masters and Johnson for the alleged lapses.

"They were not well served by their editors, colleagues and readers," the California psychologists said. "Had hard questions been asked and had errors been pointed out instead of swept away in the tidal wave of excitement and congratulation, we think the St. Louis researchers probably would have improved on their methods and reporting."

Zilbergeld is former research director of clinical training in the Human Sexuality Program of the University of California at San Francisco. Evans is former research director of the Cowell Hospital Sexuality Counseling Program of the University of California at Berkeley.

Some answers to your insect problems

Q: "We seem to have an abundance of wood bugs. Is there any way we can be rid of them or at least decrease their numbers?"

Sow bugs, also called wood lice or pillbugs, abound where there is a lot of organic matter. They are usually not damaging except to young seedlings. If they seem to be damaging your plantings, spray with Diazinon 12 per cent emulsifiable concentrate at four tablespoons per gallon of water. Spray the area where the damage is occurring but avoid the plantings.

Q: "I've noticed a few tiny dark flies around my houseplants lately and I'm wondering whether they could do any damage to the plants?"

These are likely adult fungus gnats, a harmless nuisance. However, the young are white maggots which can injure the roots and crown of the plants. The conditions in which they thrive are moist soil and an abundance of decaying plant matter.

Try to keep the soil a bit on the dry side. I have found scratching in just a few onion maggot granules into the soil gets rid of them, provided it is used with a very light hand, especially with African Violets and Gloxinias.

Q: "Could you identify the two enclosed specimens for me. Are the little red berries on the one edible?"

I'm afraid I can't give a satisfactory reply to your question for several reasons. First, I'm neither a botanist nor a trained horticulturist, just an ordinary backyard gardener without formal training in this field.

Secondly, since you are interested in eating the berries of the plant I wouldn't want the responsibility of identifying it only to have them turn out to be something else and quite poisonous.

I would suggest that you take specimens of your plants to the nearest Ministry of Agriculture office for POSITIVE identification before consuming the berries. Alternatively, you might also try a local nursery but be sure to tell them you want to know if the berries are edible.

Q: "I wonder what I do to my patience plant. The leaves turn yellow and fall."

The most common cause of patience plants (Impatiens) showing yellow leaves is that they have been allowed to dry out. They will droop, turn yellow and drop if allowed to dry out for even a few hours.

However, leaf drop can be due to many other factors: sudden change in environment, in temperature or light intensity, cold water, dry air, transplant shock, overwatering, overfeeding.

I would not, as you were advised, plant Impatiens in pure peat. The soil can be quite peaty but not made up of just peat.

Q: "What procedure should I follow with the bulblets my tulip bulbs have produced this season?"

In dividing tulip bulbs, many gardeners keep the small bulblets and plant them in a special place where, given enough time, they will grow into flowering-sized bulbs.

In the fall, plant the bulblets in ground that has been well prepared with added humus and bone meal. They should be placed about eight inches (20 centimetres) deep in sandy soil, five to six inches (12 to 15 cm) deep in heavy soil, and six inches (15 cm) apart.

They may need a season or two to send up foliage, ripen off and plump up before they arrive at flowering size. When the foliage has died down in summer, check one or two of the bulbs to see how they have sized up. Once they reach a size comparable to ones you have bought, then they can be planted up that autumn in your display area.

Given the patience to wait a season or two for the small bulbs to size up, the home gardener can save himself a small fortune on the price of spring flowering bulbs.

Snake for soup

HONG KONG (CP) — Snake soup is one of the specialty dishes served during Hong Kong's winter months. Natives believe that snake meat heats the human body, protecting it from cold, and that the more venomous the snake the more potent the meat.

No pay phone rate hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Telephone Co. has no immediate plans to increase pay telephone rates, company spokesman Keith Matthews said Wednesday.

In Ontario and Quebec, pay telephone calls will double to 20 cents, likely within a week, following approval Tuesday by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission. But B.C. Tel has not asked for a pay phone rate increase in an application currently before the CRTC, Matthews said.

Bidding Quiz

You are South in each of the following three hands. What would you bid at the point where the question mark appears?

1. ♠— ♡QJ74 ♢AKJ5 ♣AKJ92

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠

2. ♠AQJ4 ♡62 ♢Q3 ♣AQ972

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

3. ♠Q85♡h AJ87 ♢A94 ♣Q96

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	?

1. Two spades. You should enthusiastically welcome the spade overcall and take advantage of it by cuebidding the suit. This tells partner that a game is certan, probably in hearts, and that a slam is only inches away. North may have any one of the following hands for his heart bid:

♠J63	♡K10852	♢Q7	♣Q84
♠9742	♡A98653	♢8	♣Q3
♠863	♡AK8532	♢9	♣753

and with the first two a small slam is virtually certain, while with the last one a grand slam is probable.

2. Four hearts. Under the circumstances, it is best to raise North to game in hearts with only two baby trumps. It is surely reasonable to assume that partner has at least six hearts when he bids the suit three times, and hearts are therefore playable even opposite a doubleton.

You have a sound opening bid facing partner's opening bid, which means there's game somewhere. With North unable to support clubs or spades, and apparently unwilling to play notrump, there is no real choice but to undertake the game in hearts. Partner may have any one of these hands:

♠K73	♡AQJ983	♢J6	♣86
♠986	♡KQJ7543	♢A8	♣10
♠K5	♡AQ98754	♢K7	♣63

and with each of them you'd belong in four hearts.

3. Six notrump. This is one of those occasions when reaching the best contract is simply a matter of arithmetic. North's rebid of three notrump indicates at least 20 points and a balanced hand. Adding your 13 points to partner's, you have the 33 in the combined hands that make a slam contract virtually mandatory.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"The price?" Steve asked. "Well, I figured out something on it."

Betty smiled. "One of your number gimmicks?"

"You might call it that," her husband replied. "The whole amount in cents is just one less than what you get if you subtract the square of the dollars from twice the square of the cents."

What was it?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: VOTER was 16037, odd.

We're feminists too: Miss World

The Canadian Press

"We are feminists too," says the organizer of the Miss Canada World beauty contest that is to be held in Ottawa later this month — an event which stirred up local controversy because $2,000 of the residents' tax money was earmarked for it.

Jennifer Hosten-Craig, who was Miss World 10 years ago and later high commissioner in Ottawa for her native Caribbean island of Grenada, says the idea that beauty contests are nothing more than sexist events at which men can leer at scantily clad beauties is outdated.

"Now there is an input by women who have been through them, and it is for a worthy cause. When women are involved, they should know what is good for them."

Among the people who have been invited to receive awards or otherwise participate in the program are Karen Kain, Mme. Jehanne Benoit, Christopher Plummer, Toller Cranston, Andre Gagnon, Phil Esposito, Liona Boyd, Al Waxman, Gloria Loring and Ambassador Ken Taylor.

The executive of the Ottawa-Carleton regional municipality originally voted to give the pageant $2,000 in recognition of the event's tourism potential for local business. After hearing from area feminists, the full council decided not to make the grant.

The proposed grant would have been less than two per cent of the pageant's total cost, most of which will be borne by television advertisers and gate receipts — at $8 a ticket — for the final judging.

Heston and son team up on 'Mountain Men'

scott's world

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD — Charlton Heston and his son, Fraser, 25, walked from the blazing family tennis court high on a ridge in the Santa Monica mountains into the spacious coolness of their home.

There is an undemonstrative closeness between father and son, a camaraderie of the tennis court, shared experiences, a friendship which surpasses kinship.

Fraser is at least as tall as his famous father. He is constructed in the same rangy, big-boned Heston mold. He sports a mustache, probably for maturity.

Fraser is not as dramatic in appearance as his sire. He did not inherit the noble crook in his father's nose, nor dad's sonorous voice. His features belong more to his mother, Lydia.

But Fraser shares his father's unblinking honesty, a high degree of intelligence and, if anything, is as articulate as his dad.

Father and son completed a new movie, The Mountain Men, earlier this year with Chuck starring in Fraser's screenplay. It was a proud and happy time for both men.

Not since Walter and John Huston, who did Treasure of the Sierra Madre, has a famous actor father and writer son collaborated in like manner.

Accusations of nepotism haven't been made vis a vis Fraser's debut as a screenwriter. Understandably. It's almost impossible to fake a script. A screenplay is either valid or it isn't. Fraser's script was a professional job.

"This has been a great opportunity for me," Fraser said. His father listened thoughtfully, sipping a soft drink, as his son spoke.

"It's traditional for a son to work with his father — farmers, businessmen and the professions like law and medicine. So it's not unnatural that a son should get involved in his father's work in show business, too.

"Working with Dad has been fun. It's been a terrific experience learning the nuts and bolts of the business from Dad, who brought his knowledge of 52 pictures with him."

Fraser's only previous professional experience on a movie set was in The Ten Commandments when, as an infant of three months, he played the baby Moses in the film which, more than any other, made his father a superstar.

"It intrigued me to have Fraser on The Mountain Men," Heston said. "After five days of shooting, he grinned and told me, 'It's amazing. I made up these people and here they are, come to life. It's a marvelous feeling.'

"The character he wrote for me, Bill Tyler, is different from any other I've played. There's more humor and less formality to him than the sober men I've portrayed so often.

"Fraser knows me so well, he recognized that humor is something I like to do and can do. Tyler is not a great man — certainly not a genius or an artist or an historical figure. He's a sandy survivor."

"I wrote Tyler specifically with Dad in mind which makes a better ultimate film because I understand his makeup and character so well," Fraser added.

"There's a definite advantage in knowing an actor in advance of writing a script. After I met Brian Keith and Stephen Macht (who co-star in the film) I rewrote a lot of the dialogue."

The Mountain Men was a perfect starting property for Fraser. He is an environmentalist and conservationist who knows the Rocky Mountains well. He lived in Wyoming for a time.

He was a guide on Idaho's Salmon River and lived in the mountain hamlet of Ketchum, Idaho. He also worked with Eskimos and Indians during a year's work on the Yukon River in Alaska.

At one time he wanted to become a marine biologist, but the thought of becoming an actor, following in his father's footsteps, never occurred to him.

"It just never came up," Fraser said, "so I never considered it. Dad might have dissuaded me if I had shown an interest in acting. He knows that 85 percent of Screen Actors Guild members make less than $10,000 a year.

Iran firing squads kill 19 more

The Associated Press

Iranian firing squads executed 19 more people at dawn today, including 15 rebel soldiers and the former head of the central bank, Tehran Radio said. Meanwhile, eight Western ambassadors, apparently got nowhere in their demand for the release of the 52 U.S. hostages, now in their 286th day of captivity.

The rebel soldiers, including an officer identified only as retired Lt.-Gen. Mahdiyun, were convicted of planning the military-led coup against Ayatollah Khomeini. Their deaths brought to 68 the number put to death for the plot, which the regime said it discovered last month.

The broadcast said the others executed included Yusof Khoshkish, "former governor of the central bank during the satanic era" of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Khoshkish was convicted of "treason concerning public funds," the broadcast said.

Also executed was Eshan Shambazi, "the thinking brain" of the shah's secret police, SAVAK. Tehran Radio said Shambazi had represented SAVAK at a number of international police conferences and was found guilty of "strengthening the foundations of the hated Pahlavi regime."

On Thursday, the ambassadors of Austria, Norway, Switzerland, Finland, Spain, Australia, New Zealand and Greece met with parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani to "express our anxiety concerning the continued detention of the U.S. hostages and ask for measures for their release since their detention contradicts international relations," Tehran Radio said.

Khomeini has given the Majlis final authority over the fate of the hostages.

The broadcast said Rafsanjani told the ambassadors he will discuss their request with parliament, called the Majlis, but reiterated Iran's position that the hostages were members of an "espionage den" at the U.S. Embassy before its takeover Nov. 4 by Iranian militants.

Meanwhile, the official Pars news agency reported 67 "mercenary raiders" were killed and 43 injured today in a battle with government troops in Kermanshah province, 420 kilometres west-southwest of Tehran. The news agency said the engagement began after armed attackers downed a helicopter carrying government officials, and Iranian soldiers came to their rescue.

Bonnie's nothing after mighty Allen

MIAMI (UPI) — The season's second tropical storm is churning across the Atlantic, but forecasters say Bonnie looks like less of a threat to the United States than mighty Hurricane Allen.

Bonnie developed Thursday and quickly built its sustained winds to 55 mph. Forecasters said satellite pictures at 10:30 p.m. showed the storm was poorly organized and had little chance of becoming a hurricane today.

Bonnie is "less of a threat to the U.S. than Hurricane Allen was when it was in the same area," forecaster Gil Clark at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said.

Bonnie was between 300 and 400 miles north of where Allen formed, Clark said, and more likely to be swept up the Atlantic and away from land.

Bus drivers join Polish dock strike

WARSAW (UPI) — Strikes by more than 50,000 workers brought transportation to a halt in the major Baltic port of Gdansk today and Polish leader Edward Gierek returned from the Soviet Union to deal with the growing demands for labor and political reform.

The walkout in Gdansk by shipyard workers and bus drivers capped six weeks of mushrooming labor unrest and appeared to pose the most serious challenge to the authority of the state since worker riots in the same city led to the fall of Premier Wladyslaw Gomulka's government in 1970.

Reports from Gdansk, 175 miles northwest of Warsaw, said between 50,000 and 60,000 workers were on strike, their ranks swelled when bus drivers joined shipyard workers in a sympathy strike that brought municipal transportation to a halt in the city of 500,000 people.

Without commenting on the unrest itself, the Soviet news agency Tass said Gierek returned to Warsaw from the Soviet Crimea. Officially, he was in the Crimea for a "rest."

Dissident sources said the Gdansk strikers were making political as well as labor demands.

Besides seeking an average $66 per month raise, the dockyard workers were demanding the replacement of their present union locals with freely-elected workers' committees, the sources said.

The financial spur to the growing wave of strikes — there have been well over 150 walkouts since July 1 — was a government decision to increase meat prices by 40 to 60 percent through the removal of price subsidies.

Israeli raiders hit Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Seaborne Israeli soldiers, under a cover of helicopter gunships, attacked Palestinian targets along the southern Lebanese coast during the night, and the Israeli command reported at least three guerrillas killed in strikes as close at 30 kilometres from Beirut.

Lt.-Gen. Raphael Eytan, Israel's military chief of staff, said the raiders went after guerrilla traffic on the Lebanese coastal highway. In addition to the guerrillas killed, one vehicle was blown up, Eytan told Israel Radio today. He did not elaborate.

A terse statement issued by the Tel Aviv command gave few specifics of the raid, the first reported Israeli strike into southern Lebanon in two months.

The army said soldiers attacked Palestinian bases "in a number of places" north of the coastal cities of Tyre and Sidon, 25 and 55 km north of the Israeli border respectively.

All the raiders returned safely, said a spokesman, who described the action as a move "to prevent terrorist attacks in Israel."

There was speculation the attack might be linked to an Israeli report Thursday that one of its gunboats came under fire Wednesday night while patrolling along the Lebanese coast. Israel said the gunboat returned fire. No casualties were reported.

Meanwhile, in Cairo, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat today proposed a new summit meeting after the November U.S. presidential election as the "best course" for resolving the Egyptian-Israeli deadlock over the future of the Palestinians.

The Egyptian leader made the proposal in a letter to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, the latest in a series of messages concerning the dispute between the two countries over Jerusalem.

Sadat wrote it would be "unfair and discourteous" to seek such a meeting while U.S. President Carter is running for re-election.

"The least we can do in recognition of his contribution is to appreciate his position and hold the summit when these preoccupations (the election) are over," the Egyptian said.

There was no immediate public comment on the proposal from Israel or Washington.

Elsewhere, Uruguay announced it will move its embassy out of Jerusalem and the Netherlands said it will consider doing so, both apparently bowing to Arab threats to cut ties with any country that keeps its mission in the holy city.

In Montevideo, the Uruguayan government said Thursday its decision to move the embassy to Tel Aviv "is meant to express Uruguay's concern for the special situation of the holy city for the three great religions," but "should not in anyway affect the deep and cordial ties we have with Israel."

Third hijacking by homesick

SAN JUAN (AP) — The third jetliner hijacked from Florida to Cuba this week landed in Puerto Rico early today after it was commandeered by two young men who made it back to their homeland by threatening to torch the plane with a little plastic bottle of gasoline, passengers said.

The 12 crew members of the National Airlines DC-10 refused to talk to reporters, but some of the 209 passengers who disembarked — many carrying shopping bags full of Cuban rum and cigars — said the hijackers identified themselves as Cubans who wanted to return to their families.

They said one of the hijackers had light skin and was tall and skinny, and the other was slightly shorter, a little bit heavier and darker, and had a black moustache. They said one carried what looked like a "pint mouthwash bottle" of gasoline and kept threatening to set it afire with a lighter.

Lieut. Dirk Rodriguez of the U.S. Air Force, a native of Ponce, Puerto Rico, who was a passenger, said the hijackers were in the 12th row of the first tourist cabin of National Flight 872 bound to San Juan from Miami and made their move about 7:40 p.m. EDT Friday, about one hour after takeoff.

He said they pulled out the bottle and started making threats, then splashed gasoline around four seats, sending two passengers to the lavatory to wash up as the odor of the gasoline spread through the plane.

Nine-year-old boy shoots playmate

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Officials sought a decision Thursday whether to prosecute a nine-year-old boy who police say shot a six-year-old playmate through the heart, then dragged the dying child outside and left him under a stairwell.

Brian Strattard died Tuesday of a bullet wound in the chest following an argument with the nine-year-old, whose identity was withheld by police. The argument — witnessed by another youth who also saw the shooting — was over a bullet, police said.

Deputy District Attorney Ed Checkert said prosecuting a child so young is rare but "it can be done."

Police said Brian had gone to the older boy's apartment to retrieve a bullet he had found on a nearby hillside, but had discarded, investigators said.

The youthful witness, Anthony Donato, a friend of both boys, said he watched Tuesday as the older boy first slammed the apartment door in Brian's face, then shot him with a .22-calibre rifle when Brian entered the apartment.

"I was standing right by Brian," Donato told reporters and police. "Then the boy said: 'You better get out of here, buddy, or I'll shoot you.' And then Brian said no and he shot him. He just fell down and made a noise."

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

About 30 trucks and six fireboats from 23 fire departments had the fire under control within about three hours.

'Pig riots' death toll mounts

NEW DELHI (AP) — Fresh violence was reported today in the northern Indian city of Moradabad, where more than 100 persons have been killed in rioting caused by reports that pigs strayed into a mosque during a Moslem prayer service.

Officials in Moradabad, 160 kilometres east of New Delhi, said armed mobs were defying curfew orders and roaming through Moslem areas, kidnapping policemen and passersby, the United News of India, the domestic news agency, reported.

The officials were quoted as saying police were reluctant to patrol the streets because they were being fired on from rooftops.

A curfew, imposed on the city after the first wave of rioting on Wednesday, was extended until Saturday, the agency reported.

A senior district official at Moradabad told the news agency that "many more bodies" were being recovered from various parts of the city following the initial disturbances.

The first riots were spurred by Moslem claims that pigs strayed into a mosque compound during prayers. Pork is taboo for Moslems and the presence of pigs at Islamic prayers amounts to desecration.

The Moslems said that they hurled stones to drive off the animals but that policemen standing nearby assumed the missiles were aimed at them and fired at the worshippers.

The crowd panicked and stampeded, crushing scores of people to death, authorities said.

Officials said the Moslems then spilled onto the city's roads fighting with policemen and attacking homes and stores owned by Hindus. A police station also was attacked and burned.

India, which is predominantly Hindu, has one of the largest Moslem populations in the world, about 65 million out of a total population of 676 million.

Peking taking big swat at bugs

TOKYO (AP) — Armed with fly-swatters, spades, brooms and pesticide sprayers, about one million people in Peking took part in a campaign today to rid the city of mosquitoes and flies, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

Xinhua said that from early morning people began to clean up the streets and public toilets and drain water from all places mosquitoes might breed, such as air-raid shelters, fire-prevention vats and ruts and hollows.

They also replaced fly-traps and mosquito-killing lamps they had placed in courtyards earlier in the summer, Xinhua said.

According to the municipal committee for the patriotic health campaign, Xinhua said, the mosquito population nearly doubled that of last year because of humid weather over the past couple of weeks. But it added that the fly population dropped about 30 per cent after an earlier drive to rid flies.

Xinhua quoted committee officials as saying "this is our usual assault against mosquitoes and flies at this time of the year. To avoid air pollution, we are encouraging people to use pesticide sprays instead of fumigants."

Afghan rebels spread

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Fighting between rival Afghan government factions has spread from Kabul to the provinces, further weakening the Soviet grip on the country, reports from the country said today.

Beefed up Afghan security forces apparently have imposed an uneasy calm in Kabul, where street fighting between rival factions as well as rebels and government forces had been daily occurrences, the reports said.

One diplomats said the city was "an island of tranquility" compared to the rest of the nation.

"It is not representative of what is going on in the rest of the country," where Moselm rebel activity, political infighting in the army and military insurgency have intensified, said the diplomat, an expert on current affairs in Afghanistan.

Soviet-run Radio Kabul also reported dramatic increases in factional and rebel violence in mountainous regions in Kunduz, Samangan, Balkh and Badakhshan provinces to the north of Kabul near the Soviet border.

The radio said today that "a large group of people" had fled their homes in Kunduz province because of "the cruelty and barbarity" of followers of the late President Hafizullah Amin, a founder of the current anti-government Khalq faction.

"The activities of the subversives and foreign elements and spies have been stepped up," the radio reported twice this week.

It said, "American imperialism, Chinese chauvinism and the reactionaries of the region are trying their best to infiltrate their agents and mercenaries to kill, burn, blow up, terrorize, destroy and create fear and tension."

Vancouver-born Playmate shot dead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dorothy Stratten of Vancouver, Playboy magazine's current Playmate of the Year, was killed with a shotgun blast in the face, apparently by her estranged husband, who then shot himself to death, police said today.

The body of the 20-year-old beauty was found at 12:30 a.m. sprawled across the bed in the two-storey, West Los Angeles home she had shared until recently with her husband, Paul Snyder, 29, formerly of Surrey.

Neither was dressed, and Snyder was found on the floor, on top of the shotgun, said police Lieut. Glenn Ackerman. The lieutenant said friends came to the house and found the couple after no one had been able to reach Snyder since Thursday afternoon.

"The indications are that they died sometime yesterday (Thursday) afternoon," Ackerman said.

He said the couple had been married about two years, but for the last two months Ms. Stratten had been living elsewhere. Ackerman said the couple's relatives were out of the country.

"The death of Dorothy Stratten comes as a shock to us all," said Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner in a statement released by his office. "She was a beautiful and talented woman. As Playboy's Playmate of the Year and with a film and TV career of increasing importance, her professional future was a bright one. But equally sad to us was the fact that the loss takes from us all a very special friend of the Playboy family."

Ms. Stratten's most recent appearance was in a Peter Bogdanovich film, They All Laughed, and in a movie called Galaxina, that has not yet been released, said Playboy. She also had bit parts in the movies Americathon and Skatetown, U.S.A.

The tall blonde first appeared in a Playboy centrefold in August, 1979, and was named Playmate of 1980 last April 29. She was the first Canadian to hold the title.

Forest firm bought out

Three B.C.-based forest products companies have reached agreement with ITT Industries of Canada to purchase the assets of Rayonier Canada for about $420 million.

B.C. Forest Products Ltd., Doman Industries Ltd. and Whonnock Industries Ltd. said they will participate as equal partners in the ownership and operation of the venture.

Each company will pay $140 million.

A BCFP spokesman called it "a bail-out operation."

The spokesman said Rayonier's financial position had been questionable and it had been obvious that ITT had been looking for a buyer.

No B.C. company wanted to get involved on its own.

After the purchase, Rayonier will continue to operate as a separate company but will get a new name.

There is no plan to change management at the present time.

But the three purchasing companies will appoint all members to the new board of directors.

The new company will operate out of the Rayonier office in Vancouver, where 200 people are employed. In all Rayonier Canada has 3,000 employees in B.C.

"We hope we can protect all 3,000 jobs," Clugston said.

"We got involved in this because we believe it is better for B.C. forest products companies to have their headquarters in Vancouver rather than New York."

The three firms have not completed a financial study of Rayonier and it is not known how long it will take to show a profit.

None of the assets will be transferred to the three companies. The sale is scheduled to be completed on Sept. 30.

ITT Industries is a wholly-owned subsidiary of International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. of New York. It has been a liability for the ITT conglomerate, which was forced to write off Rayonier losses of $2.10 U.S. a share last year.

Shares of BCFP, Doman and Whonnock traded briskly on rumors of the Titanic believed located

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. search party believes it has found the ocean liner Titanic, which sank 68 years ago after hitting an iceberg 330 nautical miles off the Newfoundland coast, the expedition leader reported today.

"We think we've got the Titanic," Mike Harris said by ship-to-shore telephone from the reseach vessel H.J.W. Fay.

"We won't be sure until we send the television cameras down but the sonar shows it's the right length, right width and right height of the Titanic," Harris said.

The sonar sighting, using a sophisticated scanning sled submerged beneath the Atlantic, located what appeared to be a ship's outline at a depth of 3,600 metres, he said.

Logging tax debt written off

The cabinet approved on Thursday a write-off of $279,224 in uncollectible logging taxes — nearly two-thirds of it owed by one U.S.-based logging operation.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said the amount represents slightly more than one half of one per cent of the total logging taxes collected for the 1978-79 fiscal year.

He said out-of-province logging operators who harvest timber from private lands have occasionally posed a problem in the past.

The government tried unsuccessfully to collect the taxes owed by the unidentified U.S. company, then took the matter to court. However, the U.S. court did not recognize B.C.'s right to collect tax in that jurisdiction, Curtis said.

1971 dollar is now worth a mere 47¢

OTTAWA (CP) — The annual inflation rate remains steady at 10.1 per cent even though the consumer price index increased more slowly by 0.8 per cent in July from a month earlier, Statistics Canada reported today.

As a result of the latest rise, the purchasing power of a consumer's dollar fell to 47 cents from $1.00 in 1971.

Food prices, which account for one-quarter of the index, increased only 0.9 per cent in July compared with a 2.2 per cent jump in June. The influx of domestic produce in late summer months usually helps slow food prices until early fall.

The increase in other items excluding food rose by 0.8 per cent in July, unchanged from a month earlier, as costs rose for housing and transportation.

The index stood at 211.5 in July up from 209.9 in June. The index, a widely-used measure of inflation, shows that a basket of goods and services which cost $100 in 1971 now costs $211.50.

The index, above 10 per cent for the second month in a row, matches similar increases last seen in late 1975 shortly after wage and price controls were introduced.

Finance Minister Allan MacEachen had forecast about a 10 per cent rise in the index but, until he brings in an expected fall budget, is not likely to announce inflation-fighting measures.

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative treasury board critic, called the latest figures alarming and said a budget is "long overdue." He said the government must reduce its $14.1 billion spending deficit to help in the fight against inflation.

Despite the slower pace of food price increases, costs rose for some fresh fruits and vegetables while consumers in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Alberta paid more for milk and other dairy products.

But the higher costs were offset by lower prices for beef cuts and sugar.

In July, the index of food for home use was up 9.3 per cent above a year earlier while food away from home rose only 8.5 per cent. As a result, the food index was up 9.1 per cent from a year ago.

Postal interrogators told how to bend rules

VANCOUVER (CP) — A suspect's demands to see his lawyer in the case of postal thefts should be discouraged so chances of a confession are enhanced, says a paper distributed at a postal investigators training course in 1974.

The paper, which sets out a list of interrogation techniques, came to light at hearings of an inquiry into post office security being held in Vancouver this week.

The training document came as somewhat of an embarrassment to postal officials who are lobbying to have their security and investigation branch set up as a departmental police force with powers to arrest, make searches and gather evidence.

Although Jack Foster, director of security and investigation for the Western postal region, said the paper and its handy hints for interrogators were never post office policy and was prepared by a Calgary city police inspector named Roberts, there are references throughout to mail thefts and postal investigators.

Foster told the inquiry, headed by Ontario county

BAGHDAD (AFP) — Fifty-nine children were killed and 45 others injured in a cinema fire Thursday in this Iraqi capital, the Iraqi news agency said today.

An interior ministry spokesman said the high death toll was caused by the children panicking and heading for the cinema's rear exit, the agency said.

Jimmy's triumph upstaged

NEW YORK (AP) — On his night of triumph, Jimmy Carter could have expected it: the crowd's biggest roar greeted the man he beat, Edward Kennedy.

Delegates to the Democratic national convention, having duly renominated him, gave the president a respectful hearing. But there was no passion in their response. The passion was saved for Kennedy.

Carter had hoped to at least share the senator's spotlight in a traditional show of unity. But there was no upraising of arms, only a cool handshake from Kennedy.

Carter's speech was a warning to the Democrats about the evils of Ronald Reagan Republicanism and the burden of their times.

"We told the truth, the hard truth," Carter said. "The truth sometimes hurt."

Not much to cheer about there.

And, stunningly, there was the rumble of booing that rose in the middle of Carter's speech when, describing himself as a man of action in the White House, he cited his grain embargo against the Soviet Union and the registration of youth for military draft.

Cheers and chanting arose to compete with the jeers, but a renewed booing greeted Carter's mention of the American boycott of the Moscow Olympic Games, souring the televised program's attempt to show a party unified for the struggle against the Republicans.

The president finished speaking. He was applauded. The band played. But there was not much else of a response.

More eyes were on a ceiling basket of balloons that wouldn't open than on a president claiming his party's reward.

It was that kind of speech and that kind of convention: Carter was the foreordained winner, but Kennedy was the sentimental favorite.

Within minutes after Carter had finished talking, the crowd was shouting "We want Ted."

Kennedy had not been in the convention hall for Carter's speech, staying instead in his hotel. The president and the party had to wait for Kennedy to make his way through Manhattan traffic to Madison Square Garden.

And when he finally reached the jammed platform, the crowd, for the first time of the night, roared.

Kennedy shook hands with Rosalynn Carter and then Amy, the president's daughter.

Carter waited. He grabbed the senator's hand and slapped his back and brought him forward.

Carter smiled broadly. Kennedy didn't. He shook hands all around and made his way off the platform.

Again the crowd cried: "We want Ted."

Again Kennedy returned.

Again the crowd cheered.

A woman in a white plastic boater held aloft a handwritten sign: "Write in Kennedy."

In his speech accepting the nomination, Carter said: "Ted, your party needs — and I need — you. I need your idealism and dedication working for us. There is no doubt that even greater service lies ahead of you. And we will make great partners this fall in whipping the Republicans."

The delegates applauded.

Carter, the winner, was upstaged by Kennedy, the loser.

Loved him in Lethbridge but he bombed in Brandon

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Doug Christie is tired but confident, apprehensive yet hopeful.

One of the west's foremost proponents of western independence, Christie recently completed a four-week swing through the western provinces, drawing mostly small but (according to Christie) enthusiastic audiences.

Despite the limited response, however, the Victoria lawyer and his two aides — Don French and Paul Pappajohn — feel they're on the brink of something great.

Although they're not sure what rocks lie below that precipice, they're sufficiently sure of the righteousness of their cause to urge us all to leap.

Their cause is independence and their group is the Western Canada Concept, formed when the Western National Association fell victim to internal dissension.

Christie, 34, a founding member of the WNA, and a core of loyal followers decided it was best to separate themselves from the WNA because of some of the people that group had attracted.

There were suggestions the Ku Klux Klan and other groups considered unsuitable by Christie and his supporters had infiltrated the WNA.

On Dominion Day, under a new name and with new hope, Christie set forth to convert the west.

But he and his backers showed remarkable naivete in planning the tour. Without an advance man there was little or no notice to the media along Christie's route of his impending appearances.

The result was poor coverage of his small successes but wide distribution of such debacles as the Brandon meeting.

Two people showed up.

Canadian Press sent a picture across the country of a dejected Christie sitting alone in a corner of a Brandon University hall.

A wire story chronicled the Winnipeg meeting which attracted only eight people.

Another wirephoto showed Christie being confronted by two Medicine Hat police officers who told the western separatist he couldn't speak in a public park without a permit.

There was no explanation why there was little or no coverage of what could be called normal turnouts for a political meeting. Some of the crowds could perhaps be considered even exceptional considering the searing heat of a Prairie July.

In Lethbridge he drew 275. There were 75 at the Penticton and Regina gatherings, 65 in Saskatoon and Edmonton.

For those meetings, there was some advance notice in newspapers.

But where communication broke down, as in Brandon and Winnipeg, attendance figures withered.

What is Christie after?

His Western Canada Concept is promoting full economic and political independence for Western Canada and Christie acknowledges the real possibility the cause could soon be usurped by Social Credit's Premier Bill Bennett who has recently made separatist noises.

But it doesn't concern him. He says if he approves of the brand of independence or separatism offered, he'll throw in his support. If he doesn't, he'll continue to thump his own political drum.

While Christie and his supporters are enthusiastic about the prospects for western independence, it appears obvious they're going to need professional help if their message is to get any serious or meaningful media exposure.

French is convinced that any westerner who hears Christie give his reasons for separation will be converted to the cause.

On tour, Christie appealed to westerners to fight the "rape of the west by the east" with the threat of separation.

Independence is "the only tool for developing the west's resources for the people living here," he said. "But if you don't care, or you don't think you have the power to change things, you won't."

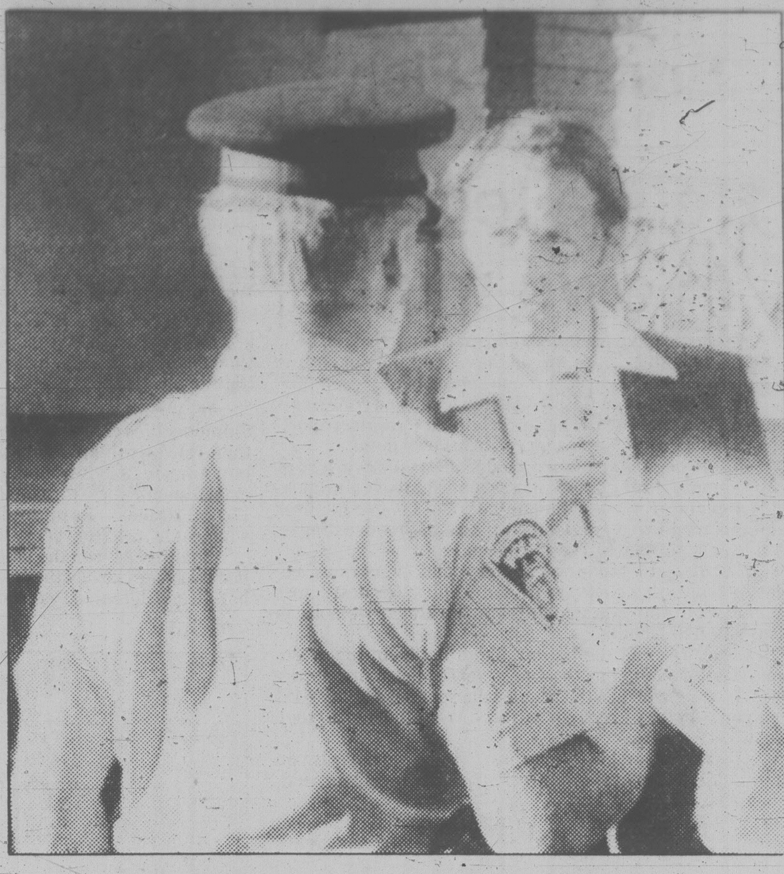
Christie said the federal government works for the interests of Ontario and Quebec. Therefore, westerners will have to fight to keep the benefits of their own resources because they have no effective voice in Ottawa.

If the benefits from resource development do not remain in the west "we will become as the Maritimes now are when our resources are depleted."

A letter distributed by Christie asked the western premiers to demand several guarantees for the west during upcoming constitutional talks. It warned if nothing is done the powers used to exploit the west will be entrenched in the constitution.

The letter called for complete benefits from resource revenues, free trade for the western provinces, an end to official bilingualism, regional control of immigration to the west, an end to equalization payments and regional representation in a reformed Senate and Supreme Court equal to the west's productive contribution to federal revenues.

If these demands are not met a referendum for independence should be held and the western premiers should start negotiations to form a new nation of Western Canada, Christie says.



No speeches in the park without a permit, Christie was told by police in Medicine Hat

TOWN TALK

University of Victoria education professor Dr. John Downing has been appointed to the research committee of the National Council of Teachers of English.

The announcement from NCTE in Urbana, Ill., says the professional organization wants to increase the effectiveness of teaching the language and its literature in the schools and colleges of North America.

Judging from the announcement, the NCTE public information office would be a good place to start the research.

It has a sentence containing 87 words, four commas, two semi-colons and three bracketed numerals.

Over to you, John.

You don't see many Bentleys these days.

One of the rare — only 100 where ever made — 1930 classics surfaced recently in Victoria where it was lovingly tuned by Rolls-Royce expert Roger Ford at Autohaus.

The car was purchased from an eccentric old Canadian navy captain by Clarendon Carriage Co. Ltd. of London for a price rumored to be more than $70,000.

Sound mechanically after four years of non-use, the car was shipped to England the other day for about $25,000 worth of body and interior restoration.

It gets five miles per gallon but then anyone who can afford it isn't going to worry about the price of fuel.

The price of real estate these days has gone right out of this world. But the farther out you go, the cheaper it gets.

For $25 you can buy a square kilometre of Mars or the Moon as part of a protest campaign by the Victoria-based North American Interplanetary Society, which opposes the signing of a UN-sponsored Moon Treaty.

According to Tim Lomas, NAIS director, only five signatories are required before the treaty comes into force, and France and Bolivia have adopted it. Lomas fears Canada may be third.

But don't expect to borrow money at the bank on the strength of your title deed to Moonscape — the document, map, photographs and instructions you will get for $25 are sold as a novelty only.

Further information and a copy of the Moon Treaty ($1) may be obtained from NAIS, 150 Montreal St., Victoria, V8V 1Y8.

Tourism Minister Pat Jordan gets some strange requests for help.

But one recently from a Montreal-based movie company, International Cinema Corporation, takes the prize for most difficult to fulfil.

The company has written to Jordan asking for her help in locating a slew of boats including a pre-1840 two-masted sailing ship, some genuine birchbark canoes and some "York" river boats similar to those used by the Hudson Bay Company around the turn of the century.

The boats are needed for a movie called "Trail Blazers," a western drama set in the 1820s.

If the company can't find the real McCoy they are hoping to find a craftsman who can build the boats.

Anyone who can provide assistance should contact the ministry's film promotion office in Vancouver.

Things you always wanted to know department . . . the belted kingfisher and great blue heron are neck-and-neck in the race for naming an official bird in North Saanich.

Ald. Jay Rangel, who is compiling the votes, says the heron is the choice of 101 voters with the kingfisher close behind with 97.

And get this you fans of the rufous hummingbird and pelagic cormorant. The bad news is that your choices are a distant third and fourth with 35 and 31 votes respectively.

For what it's worth, in the contest for official municipal flower, the white fawn lily is the runaway leader with 178 votes compared to 38 for the honeysuckle, 29 for the western columbine and 26 for the calypso orchid.

The voting ends on Aug. 31. and if you haven't voted yet, ballots are available at the Panorama Leisure Centre and the library next to Sanscha Hall.

Police get out razors

Greater Victoria police shaved and went back into uniform today after ratifying a new contract which gives them an increase in wages and fringe benefits averaging about 20 per cent over two years.

The 190 police who work for Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt voted Thursday night to accept the new contract, following earlier ratification by the member municipalities of the GVLRA.

Carl Anshelm, chief negotiator of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, said today a first-class constable will go to a monthly salary of $2,317 by July 1, 1981 in several stages.

The contract, retroactive to Dec. 31, 1979, will give first-class constables an immediate pay raise to $2,053. Next increase will be Jan. 1, 1981 to $2,207.

The present wage rate for first-class constables under the old contract — which expired at the end of 1979 — was $1,845 a month.

Some fringe benefits are also improved. There will be premium pay as an incentive to qualify for higher classifications.

For example, Anshelm said a first-class constable who qualifies for sergeant and enters a promotion list for the next vacancy will get an extra three per cent.

"It's a chance to better their qualifications," he said.

There is standardization of clothes and dry cleaning allowances and shift differential among the four core municipal police departments, Anshelm added.

Hours of work remain the same, but vacations have been improved.

One year's employment will still entitle a policeman to three weeks' holiday after one year, but to qualify for four weeks he'll need only eight years instead of 10 as before. That will be cut to seven years in 1981.

Sgt. Bryan Bailey, president of the Victoria Police Association, said the 130 city police very reluctantly gave approval to the contract which standardizes wages and fringe benefits for Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich peace officers.

"There is very real concern about the second year," Bailey said.

"There is concern with the lack of fringe benefits we enjoy when they are compared to those of other public sector unions."

Esquimalt police voted 11-6 to accept the contract. Bailey wouldn't reveal the Victoria figures. Saanich police still have a year to run on their contract, but they were included in the negotiations under a reopener clause to cover certain items.

Sidney dog killed with bow and arrow

The Victoria SPCA is investigating the bow and arrow killing of a dog in Sidney earlier this week.

Victoria SPCA manager Joseph Heald said today the dog, a St. Bernard, was shot in the chest with an arrow last Sunday.

Heald was unable to give details but said the incident apparently involved a bitch that was in heat.

The five-year-old male St. Bernard, a family pet, died some hours after the shooting in a neighbor's yard.

The dog's owner said on Thursday the bitch was enclosed in a pen with a 10-foot high fence and her St. Bernard could not have got in to the pen.

She said the man told her later he was having problems with dogs bothering his bitch.

Heald could not say if charges will be laid.

Under the Criminal Code, anyone who wilfully kills a dog is guilty of an offence punishable by a maximum $2,000 fine or six months in jail or both.

A Sidney bylaw also prohibits the discharge of any firearm within the municipality. Crossbows and longbows are included in the definition of firearms.

Beer drinkers can soak it up at the ball game

Baseball and beer go together — for the time being at least at Royal Athletic Park.

While the lockout of brewery workers has caused beer supplies to dwindle elsewhere, the city-owned facility still has large stocks, city council learned Thursday night.

Ald. Bill McElroy said he wasn't delivering a commercial for suds in the stands, but "if you want a cold beer on a hot Saturday" the stadium is the place.

Ald. Gretchen Brewin wondered if there was any beer left at Royal Athletic Park as council approved a 30-day trial for beer drinking anywhere in the stands.

McElroy replied: "If you knew our city recreation director (Jack Morgan) . . ."

'We're competitive' —Airwest

Airwest Airlines today said its Victoria-Vancouver fares have remained competitive despite sharp increases during the past 12 months.

"Our rates are about the same as Air Canada and Pacific Western Airlines on the route between the two cities," president Al Michaud said.

He was responding to a statement Thursday by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele who said Airwest needs competition to keep its fares from rising too sharply.

The company was purchased by Jim Pattison in March, 1979, and its return fare was increased from $56 to $80 in 12 months.

(The present return fare for Air Canada is $80 and for PWA $78.)

"We have not lost any customers that I know of because of our $80 return fare. In fact, our business is increasing."

Hopefully, he said, the rates could be stablized at or near present levels.

However, the company is holding its quarterly meeting today and profits are below expectations.

"We are discussing all aspects of the operation, including the rates."

He said Airwest's fares should be slightly higher than Air Canada and PWA because the land-based planes also involve limousine costs to go from downtown to downtown.

Airwest's recent cost increases, he said, included a doubling of fuel expenses in the past year and a 28 per cent increase in salaries.

The Victoria-Vancouver run is in healthy condition but some other routes were not paying as well and the company had to consider the over-all financial impact in setting rates.

Pattison owns Airwest Airlines and West Coast Air, which is being merged into the Airwest service.

Michaud is president of both air lines.

Sybil: sometimes she's vulgar

Rude, funny Fawlty couple returning to 9

Fawlty Towers, a situation comedy series of 12 half-hour riotous episodes starring John Cleese of "Monty Python" fame, begins Thursday, August 21, at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

Cleese is Basil Fawlty, proprietor of the infamous, small hotel Fawlty Towers in the somewhat select Devonshire resort of Torquay. The first episode of Fawlty Towers also airs Saturday, August 23, at 8:35 p.m.

Fawlty is an incompetent and rude host who has learned nothing from a lifetime's experience of things gone wrong. Fawlty's wife Sybil (played by Prunella Scales) is extremely efficient — not to mention bossy.

"Sybil has a vulgar streak," comments Scales about the character she plays, "which never fails to irritate Basil. His frustration is heightened by her ability to cope with situations he can't handle."

The series also stars Andrew Sachs in the role of Manuel, the hapless Spanish waiter who bears the brunt of most of Basil's rages. Connie Booth (co-author of the series with John Cleese) strikes a note of sanity as Polly, the part-time waitress, and Terry the chef (Brian Hall) is eager to ignore the beck and call of the guests.

The situations are simply outrageous. In one episode, a female guest complains to Basil that her half-eaten prawn cocktail is inedible. "Well, only half of it is inedible, apparently," says Basil, who agrees to knock half the price off the bill with further deductions the next day if she brings the other half up in the night.

Heroes of Rock 'n' Roll

Fascinating film and tape footage from the careers of 82 of the rock world's biggest stars — including Elvis Presley, the Beatles, Chubby Checker and Janis Joplin — have been combined with rarely seen clips in Heroes of Rock 'n' Roll, airing Monday at 9 p.m. on Channel 4.

The innovative movie, with commentary by Jeff Bridges, contains rare film and tape footage, including Elvis Presley's original screen test, previously unviewed footage of the Beatles and performances by Janis Joplin, Jimi Hendrix and Otis Redding.

In all, more than 400,000 feet of celluloid and electronic tape were culled to produce 100,000 feet of final footage gathered over a two-year period.

Bugsy Malone

An all-kid cast presents a spoof of the Roaring Twenties, movie musicals and gangster pictures in Bugsy Malone, starring Jodie Foster and Scott Baio, to be broadcast for the first time on television on Wednesday at 8 p.m. on Channel 7.

Gangleader Fat Sam (John Cassisi) is in an uproar. His dreaded rival, Dandy Dan(Martin Lev), and his gang, are in possession of a new weapon — the splurge gun, which shoots marshmallow goo — and Sam's men are being splurged all over the streets of New York.

Thrown in the middle of this is a sweet young thing, Blousey Brown (Florrie Dugger), who has just arrived in the city, filled with dreams of making it in show business. She hopes for a job in the chorus at Fat Sam's speakeasy.

Blousey encounters tough buy Bugsy Malone (Baio), who offers to help her achieve her dream. But, while trying to help, he runs across Tallulah (Miss Foster), Fat Sam's sharp-tongued girlfriend, and jealousy rears its head.

TV Mailbag

BOTHERED — My friend and I are fans of the old "Bewitched" series. I could have sworn that the character Serena was played by an actress named Pandora and not by Elizabeth Montgomery. My friend say it's Montgomery. Can you help? — Lisa Serofin, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Miss Montgomery played both Samantha and her mischievous cousin Serena. The name Pandora listed in the closing credits was just a gag.

YOUNG LOVERS — I recently saw "Romeo and Juliet" on television for the first time. Can you tell me what year the film was made and how old Leonard Whiting and Olivia Hussey were at the time? How old are they now? Also, wasn't she once married to someone famous? — Monica Lewiston, Wayland, Mass.

The Franco Zeffirelli film was made in 1966. Whiting was 16 at the time and Hussy was 15, making them now 30 and 29. If Dino Martin is a celebrity to you, then she was married to a well-known person. Hussey and Dino's son were divorced after several years of marriage and one son.

TRAPPED — Is the actor who plays Trapper on the old reruns of "M.A.S.H.," the same actor who plays Michael on "House Calls"? — J. Doyle, Holliston, Mass.

Wayne Rogers was Trapper for the first three years of the series and now stars in "House Calls" as yet another doctor, while Pernell Roberts, who was Adam Cartwright on "Bonanza," now plays an older Trapper on "Trapper John, M.D."

StarScene

You've been told to "Think thin." Why? Well, when it's the medics expounding, they have goals like "Health" and "Longevity" as lures.

But among your show-biz types, there are those who think — initially briefly, if at all — about what is involved in gaining 20 pounds, or 30 pounds, for a role. Ann-Margret did it for the movie Carnel Knowledge, because she knew that director Mike Nichols (a perpetual skinny no matter what pate-laden buffets you walk him past) saw her character as a compulsive who had few no-no's, including (especially?) food.

A-M had to take off the poundage thereafter — and not easy — for that trim strength she needs (blubber could be a killer) for her daring Vegas club act.

Shelly Winters, who told Merv Griffin that though she tends to be fat and twice ate her way to whale-like silhouettes for "big" roles (the mother in The Diary of Anne Frank and The Poseidon Adventure), she is now on a skinny-ing plan, not for cosmetic reasons.
